The Southern California ASL Club presents....

MP13: THE BLUE HOUSE

January 6, 1945
Wingen-sur-Moder, France:
Fox Company, 2nd Battalion, 274th Regiment was told resistance would be light and Wingen-sur-Moder could be quickly secured. The fanatical SS entrenched in the buildings on the town's western edge convinced Fox Co. that this would be no cakewalk.

MP14: STUBBORN FERDINAND

August 17, 1943
Poretscha, Russia:
The landers of "Stubborn" Ferdinand's 11th Company had held the elevated cemetery through seven days of unrelenting assault, bombardment and barrage. The 364th Guards Rifle Division was given the privilege of removing Ferdinand once and for all.

MP15: JUST A BIT OUTSIDE

March 4, 1944
Walawbum, Burma:
Weston's I&R platoon has crossed the Numpyek Hka to set up an overwatch position for Merrill's Marauders. The Japanese have them pinned against the river. Can the platoon sergeant dial in the covering 81mm mortar OBA before the Americans are overrun?

MP16: POWER STRUGGLE

October 23, 1944
Tarnet, Norway:
With Finland out of the war, the Russian 14th Army is moving to liberate Norway. The port town of Tarnet lies across the main advance. Will the hardened landers of the 6th Gebirgsjaeger Division be able to hold the vital Power Station long enough?

MP17: BAGGING BURCORPS

March 29, 1942
Near Shwedaung, Burma:
The 2nd Battalion, The Duke of Wellington's Regiment is falling back from a failed assault against Paungde. The Japanese 33rd Division is in hot pursuit along the narrow jungle paths. Can the 2nd "Dukes" maintain their orderly retreat or will they be overwhelmed?

MP18: MARSH MADNESS

August 8, 1941
Yurky, Russia:
The 6th Panzer Division is attacking out of the Luga bridgehead through the surrounding overgrown, marshy forests. Can their heavily supported engineers clear the nearly invisible fortified Russian defensive positions blocking the route of advance?

MP19: SKI PATROL

January 17, 1942
Shiloy Tschernoz, Russia:
The German 290th Division has been cut off by the Russian winter offensive. Captain Ordas has been ordered to take the Ski Company of the Spanish Blue Division out into one of the coldest winters on record to re-establish contact. Can they get through?

MELEE PACK III

Welcome to Melee Pack III, SoCal ASL's third foray into the world of ASL scenario design! Yes, it's been a few years in the making but we hope you'll appreciate the extra time and attention we gave these scenarios.

Melee Pack III has seven scenarios destined to make tournament play lists everywhere! You like Burma? We do! Maybe you prefer France? Norway? Ok, ok...how about Russia? Got you covered! We've got some beautiful infantry-only scenarios and some terrific combined arms clashes. Some folks like shorter scenarios...how about one that you can finish in less than an hour? Maybe destruction of public works is more your thing...how about blowing up electrical towers for the win? Or maybe you like OBA...OBA that gets more accurate the more you use it? Some folks enjoy working out complex defenses...well we've got an all-HIP, trenches, pillboxes, wire, sneaky-crafty one for you...and we let you choose where to put the overlays!

Yeah, good stuff.

THE BLUE HOUSE

Scenario Design: Chuck Hammond

January 6, 1945: Wingen-sur-Moder, France

Lieutenant Colonel W.R. Cheves, Commander of the 274th Infantry Regiment was ordered to recapture the town of Wingen-sur-Moder. General Thomas Herren directed Cheves to "rush through to the far end of town," adding that "there are only a few Germans in there..." Lacking his promised armor support, Cheves nonetheless moved east with the three platoons of Fox Company. Resistance was light and the platoons made steady progress...until they arrived at the intersection of rue Principale and rue de la Gare which marked the town's western edge. There, straddling the crossroads, lay a silent, blue-painted, two-story house.

- One German Squad-Equivalent may set up HIP along with any SMC/SW that sets up with it in the same Location.

CONCLUSION

The SS waited until Fox Company was no more than 15 meters from the building before opening up with withering automatic fire. Despite the loss of 7 men, including the company commander and his radio operator, the relatively inexperienced soldiers of Fox Company pressed on. Using machine gun and bazooka fire to suppress the German strongpoint, the GIs were able to clear the Blue House. Fanatical resistance by the Germans holed up in the surrounding buildings drove Fox Company casualties to 50% before they were relieved later in the day. Nevertheless, their efforts had cleared the way for 2nd Battalion to recapture Wingen-sur-Moder.

August 17, 1943: Poretsha, Russia

For seven long days, 11th Company clung tenaciously to its elevated position in the cemetery near the village of Poretsha, near Lake Ladoga. Under constant fire from assaulting infantry, tanks, artillery barrages and waves of Russian aircraft, the landers lead by Hauptmann Scheckenach, nicknamed "Stubborn Ferdinand", refused to yield the heights. It was only a matter of time before the Russians of the 364th Guards Division would launch yet another assault against the seemingly indestructible Germans.

OBJECTIVE

The Russian player wins at Game End if there are no unbroken German MMC in a level one location.

ADVANTAGE

Germans:

Add one DC to the Alarm Company reinforcement group.

Russians:

Replace the 9-1 Leader with a 9-2 Leader.

- The German Pzkwf VIE may set up HIP if in concealment terrain.
- The first non-IF original To Hit DR of 12 by the Pzkwf VIE MA does not cause the MA to malfunction.

CONCLUSION

After hammering the village and cemetery again with air strikes and artillery, a renewed Russian attack ground forward, supported by T-34s. The attack quickly ran into trouble when a Tiger tank hidden in the rubble opened fire, rapidly destroying two T-34s. Ferdinand's men fought with grim determination but Russian infantry managed to work around behind the cemetery, cutting off the position. Regimental HQ sent a platoon from its Alarm Company led by Lt. Gottlob Bidermann which succeeded in restoring contact with Ferdinand's position. The fact that they were defending a Jewish cemetery was an irony lost on both Bidermann and Ferdinand.

March 4, 1944: Walawbum, Burma

1st Lt. Logan E. Weston had orders to move his Intel and Recon platoon west across the Numpyek Hka river and south to an overwatch position near Walawbum to better cover the Marauders' assault on the east bank village of Langag Ga. In the early morning fog, a Nambu light machine gun opened up as advancing Japanese made contact with Weston's position. Weston's platoon sergeant radioed for assistance from a nearby 81mm unit but the initial rounds fell off target. Needing more accurate readings to call in the fire, the sergeant bellowed, "Anybody got a compass with mils on it instead of degrees?"

All Radio Repair attempts will automatically succeed. First OBA chit draw is automatically Black. The OBA Accuracy dr for each Turn can be found on the OBA Accuracy dr Chart near the American forces listing.

CONCLUSION

A nearby medic quickly handed over his compass to the sergeant, "We medics got everything." Calculating on the fly, the sergeant adjusted the mortar fire over and over again. The deadly fire slowed each Japanese assault and covered the flanks of the platoon as they retreated in the face of overwhelming numbers. Weston ordered his men back across the river and one by one, the men of the platoon splashed back to the relative safety of the eastern bank.

October 23, 1944: Tarnet, Norway

After Finland's capitulation, Russian forces went on the offensive to liberate Norway. The Russian 14th Army attacked along Norway's north coast towards its main objective of the city of Kirkenes. Their goal was to halt mining operations in the region and liberate the Norwegian people. The city of Tarnet, which contained coastal defenses, a port and mining operations, lay across the path of the advancing Russians and was being used as an evacuation point for German forces. The battle hardened 6th Gebirgsjaeger Division was tasked with slowing the Russian advance. One critical installation, in particular, had to be defended at all costs...the Tarnet Power Station.

PLAYING AREA: Board 49, Rows S-GG; Board 22, Rows A-P

OBJECTIVE

The Russian player wins: a) instantly, by Controlling Building 22H4; b) at Game End, by being the sole Good Order occupant of Hex 22H4; c) instantly, by Shutting off the Power (see SR#6).

ADVANTAGE

Germans: Add one 228 Crew.

Russians: Add one 8-1 Armor Leader.

A Stacking Limit of ONE squad equivalent per hex applies due to the presence of the generating equipment, though Overstacking is still permitted. Guns may not set up in, nor may Vehicles enter any hex of Building 22H4.]
- Shutting off the Power: This Victory Condition can be met by disrupting at least one hex of the power lines running from the Power Station through Hexes 22I4-22J4-22K4-22L4-22M4-22N4-22O4-22P4. This can be accomplished with a successful Clearance DR in one of these hexes or by the detonation of a DC with a subsequent IFT Result of at least a 2MC after all modifiers.

CONCLUSION

Russian infantry, supported by combat engineers and attached armor filtered into Tarnet; making their way through the snow and hastily strewn barbed wire defenses. The initial Russian assault aimed to capture the Power Station and cut the power to the nearby coastal defenses and port facilities that were being used for evacuation by the Germans. The 6th Gebirgsjaeger fought desperately to defend the Power Station. Every hour the power was on gave more evacuees time to escape. Fighting raged even into the building itself amidst the hulking power generators. Overwhelming Russian numbers ultimately surrounded the Power Station defenders. The flow of power was finally halted by downing the indefensible power lines leading from the Power Station.

BAGGING BURCORPS

Scenario Design: Bryan Earll

March 29, 1942: Near Shwedaung, Burma

The Japanese 33rd Division advanced in daylight towards their objective of Prome at the same time the British "Striking Force" moved south towards its objective of Paungde. At Paungde, the British met the Japanese and made marginal progress against the continuously reinforced Japanese. With a second Japanese force located on the British left flank in the town of Padigon, the strength of the main offensive was diluted. Under orders not to be cut off, the British troops, including the 2nd "Dukes" began a fighting withdrawal towards Shwedaung, retracing their route of advance. The retreat would not be easy, as the Japanese forces moved out in pursuit of the withdrawing British.

OBJECTIVE

The Japanese win by Controlling the seven Huts on the game board at the end of any Game Turn or at Game End.

CONCLUSION

Shedding transport equipment and taking casualties at an alarming rate, the retreating "Striking Force" leapfrogged back towards Shwedaung. The pursuing Japanese launched numerous assaults at the covering units in an effort to catch the main body of British troops. Though exhausted, the British withstood these assaults and withdrew to the outskirts of Shwedaung. With the Japanese close on their heels, the British found Shwedaung to be already occupied by the Japanese 215th Regiment, 33rd Division, which had crossed the Irrawaddy River and set up a blocking position. The "Striking Force" had been bagged.

August 8, 1941: Yurky, Russia

Attacking out of the Luga bridgehead, the 6th Panzer Division, XVI Panzer Corps advanced towards its immediate objective, the town of Yurky. The terrain, consisting of medium-growth, partly-marshy forest with thick underbrush, was ideally suited for defense. Here the 2nd and 3rd People's Volunteer Rifle Divisions had deployed in prepared positions so well camouflaged that neither German patrols nor the Luftwaffe had been able to identify them over the past month. The advancing Germans had no idea what lay ahead.

ADVANTAGE

Russians: Add one LMG to the Russian Starting Forces.

Germans: Add one DC to the German Starting Forces.

- All Russian units may set up HIP. Russian Fortifications that set up in Woods or Brush lose HIP as per [G.2].
- All Elite and 1st Line Russian infantry are Stealthy and, if set up in Woods or Brush, lose HIP as per [G.4] as if set up in Jungle, Kunai or Bamboo.

- German 838s are Sappers [B28.8].
- Interrogation [E2] is in effect [EXC: Civilian Interrogation [E2.4] is NA].

CONCLUSION

The 6th Panzer Division slammed into the entrenched Russian positions and immediately bogged down. Engineers were called forward to remove roadblocks and demolish defensive works. General Raus even dispatched individual tanks to assist engineers in their attempts to clear fortifications. Despite the heavy firepower at their disposal, the Germans were unable to dislodge the Russian troops from their narrow, almost invisible trenches and well-concealed pillbox networks. Consistently heavy defensive fire drove back the German engineers time and time again. Repulsed everywhere by a largely unseen enemy, the Germans halted their advance.

- Treat the Spanish as Germans for all purposes. The Spanish are Ski-equipped [E4.4].

CONCLUSION

Setting out with 206 men, 5 machine guns and a radio, the Ski Company crossed the frozen Lake Ilmen. Casualties from frost-bite were staggering as temperatures plummeted to 40 degrees below zero. The Ski Company made contact with the Russians on 17 January near the village of Shiloy Tschernez. The fighting was brutal as even minor injuries led to death in the arctic cold. After days of attrition, the Spaniards linked up with the 290th Division on 21 January. The Ski Company had been reduced to just 20 men.
