You Need: A Distinctive 6-sided die for each player; a matching lap marker for each player; one more 6-sided die; money.

A Cheapass Racing Game for 4-8 players

Welcome to Ancient Rome, a swinging town with a little something for everyone. You're a hot-blooded aristocrat, with just enough inbreeding to make you a little defensive. And you've got a hundred Ducats burning a hot, round hole in your pocket.

You decide that gambling is your thing. Gambling is fun. Gambling is easy. And it's also woefully unregulated.

But it's not enough for you just to bet on the chariot races. No, you insist on having a piece of the action. So you buy your own chariot, outfit it with deadly weapons, and find the most ruthless chariot jockey west of the Steppes.

You're convinced that the more money you spend, the more you will win. Which is, to a certain extent, true. Even if most of what you win was yours to begin with.

But you don't have to blow your wad on the first race. Sometimes it pays to hold back, save your money, and try to win the next one instead. After all, there's a chariot race every night.

And your Ducats just keep getting hotter.
