They are alarge gang who also incorporates many other, smaller Booster gangs. Noir will generally ask one of his puppet Booster gangs to do the work he judges "too zero" for his bloodmates; The Givers of Pain. The Givers are like most of your run-of-the-mill Booster gang but they tend to torture their widtims before killing them. They are consummate artists in the art of torture. So well is their reputation that they are often looked to for such talents by other gangs or even the occasional corporation. Their initiations tend to be bloody and constructed to give the most pain possible. The average initiate must endure about filteen minutes of constant agony usually administered in some creative way. The Givers of pain are all masochists and most of them are sadomasochists. They abhor 'Dorphs because of their pain killing properties, favoring combat drugs like BlackLace and Hype. The usual favorite pastime of the average Giver is finding some drifter and torturing it to death. I enemies: Their primary enemy is the punk gang The Baskervilles led by Lady Maim. | CYBERPUNK UPDATE #2 | THE VanDamien PROCEDURE: Not much is known about the process involved in the construction and installation of the organic silicon and micro-circuitry into various parts of the brain. The procedure is very risky and is generally considered very much Blackmarket Blo-tech due to the danger to those involved and the un- predictability of the process. What is involved is the implantation of micro- processor chips of organic silicon and synthetic neuron fiber which strings together various implanted microscopic computer chipware and proces- sors. These additions augment the functions already in place in the brain so it is considered to be more akin to WetWare than to CyberWare. The VanDamien Procedure basically allows the user to have almost complete conscious control over his body and brain's functions and perceptions. This level of control has mostly to do with ignoring the way the brain perceives the body. One could make themselves ignore the feeling of hunger but he would still starve to death. One could ignore pain from a wound but a severed artery will still lead to death by loss of blood. The feelings of hunger, thirst, fatigue, pain, even pleasure if needed. The user could repress any sexual urgings or any pangs of addiction for an indefinite time. The user would not need to sleep and could ignore the feeling to expel bodily waste. Another utility of this operation is the ability to faze out any distractions so as to be able to concentrate on any single task. Background noise, that ity buzzing in front of your face, the excurciating twinge of the urinal calling. By simply cutting those sensations out the user could allow into his perception those sensations pertinent to the task at hand. There is one serious drawback to the adre mentioned abilities. If one were to repress the need to go to the bathroom, eat, drink, and tuifill any sexual desires, when the sensations were put back to normal they would be intense in the extreme based upon how long they were shut off. Where interface plugs are used, the Mega-Head (another name for Mnemonic Matrix users, referring to the mega-bytes of storage) honors the contractor's right to privacy and will not willfully access the information out of curiosity. NOTE: The Mnemonic Matrix (or also called the Memory Network or Mem-Net) is primarily a means of gaining employment, not generally for personal use. Many corporations hire Mnem-Heads as a covert means to transfer vital information where Computer Net lines or simple parcel post is too risky. Simply assign a few jacked-up Solo's to serve as bodyguards, or make the Mnem-Head a hard-wired killer himself; most freelance Mnem-Heads already are. Many Mnem-Heads freelance, serving as information safes, holding the information until its needed again. Ofttimes techies of various means use Mega-Heads as living computers to store all of their information; it can't be tapped by a NetRunner and a computer can't run out of a burning building or dodge a hand grenade. VIDEO RECORD/PLAYBACK: option for Cyberoptic:

This is a micro-video recorder assembly which is housed in the cavity behind the eye. It uses a specially designed digital analog chip or DAC which can record up to thirty minutes of imagery seen by the user. When played back the image will appear to hover three feet in front of his/ her head. This picture will be in color and will take up 60% of the user's field of vision. It can be paused, re-wound, fast-forwarded, played slow, any-thing you can conceivably do with a VCR; you can do with the image. This wasn't meant to serve wholly on its own however. With the use of interface cables and plugs one can extract the video image and make a hard copy or play directly into a television. This option does not have sound capability but with the MicroRecorder option for Cyberaudio the image will have sound as well.

option for Cyberaudio:

This is basically a boosted audio receiver system. Sounds come clearer, more defined, and the user is much more sensitive to sounds lower or higher than human perception. The user can hear sounds too low or too high (such as ultrasonic sound) for human hearing by switching to the proper frequency mode and blotting out all other noise to prevent overload. All together this option gives its user a +2 to Awareness rolls based on hearing.

MNEMONIC MATRIX:

This is a complex process which involves organic and hard circuitry, mini-microprocessors, and microscopic computer chips, all held together in a vast web of internal circuits. This network is centered in the brain but fans out, following the major nerve trunks throughout the body. This type of cyberware (or BIO-ware), cannot be detected by the usual sort of hardware detecting. It leaves no external traces, besides the usual interface plugs, and is too small and organically modified to be detected on a metal detector. What this Matrix does is store vast amounts of information. This information is usually transferred into the Mnemonic Matrix through interface cables and plugs or by using a key phrase to place the Mnem-Head (the slang for Mnemonic Matrix users) into a trance. In this state the Mnem-Head is open for the incoming data, usually transferred verbally.

When the key phrase is spoken agan, the Mnem-Head will fall into the trance (sometimes called the "Idiot-savant Mode") and recite the information in its entirety, a process which may take hours depending on the amount of information. The advantage in using the trance-method, is in the difficulty of unlawful extraction of the information. If the key phrase is hidden well enough, extraction is near impossible.
