Dead creatures within 20 feet of the device playing the CD become animated as though targeted by an animate dead spell (as described in the d20 Modern, Core Rulebook) cast at 8th level. The CD will not reanimate the same creature twice. This effect lasts for as long as the CD is playing. A typical Bardsong CD has a playing time of 30 minutes. The device used to play the CD must remain stationary for the magic to work. Moving the device will disrupt the effect and the CD will have to be started over.

Message Pen

This unassuming pen was created by a secretive mage as a means of passing messages to his allies. The user simply writes their intended message with the pen in the normal fashion. The pen stores the movements made while the message is being written. The next time the pen is touched to a sheet of paper it will 'replay' its recorded movements, causing the creature holding the pen to re-write the message. During this re-write the user loses control of their hand. The result is an effect similar to that experienced during the paranormal phenomenon known as automatic writing and could take up to 30 minutes to play out (depending upon the length and content of the recorded message). The message length is limited to what can be contained on a standard size sheet of paper. It may contain text, images, or a mix of both. The owner may set a triggering condition upon the pen (such as 'start re-write when picked-up for the third time' or 'only re-write message for Suzann Browne'). The creature that triggers the re-write can attempt to release the pen by making a successful Will save (DC 13).
