Aasimars are not just one separate species, it is a term to qualify several types of beings. Whatever the specifics, there is someone in their ancestry born from an angel or another good or lawful outsider. Aasimars tend to be powerfully charismatic beings who inspire people around them.

Churches tend to attach Aasimars to their services because of this quality and of their ancestry. They are also powerful warriors which leads them to reach leading positions in religious military orders. When serving the god their ancestry relates to, they develop powers similar to those of the god's priests. Instinct: To crush Evil

- Radiate daylight
- Excite followers
- Channel divine energy

BARGHEST

Solitary, Large, Magical, Devious, Planar, Terrifying

Range/Damage Tags Close, Reach, Near
Special Qualities Immune to mundane weapons, Keen vision and scent
Treasure d8, +1 strange or magical item, +1 thing not of this earth

There are many type of werebeasts around the world, or even the planes. The barghest is the foulest and one of the most dangerous. It doesn't like to hunt, it likes to kill. It is a master of souls who loves eating them. It can take different forms: a large powerful goblin, a stout ferocious wolf, or a terrifying thing in between. Under goblin form, it can rally a tribe and send it into war. Under wolf form, it can lead a pack of dire wolves or worgs into a deathly hunt. In hybrid form, it is always alone craving for souls to increase its power. Instinct: To kill and eat souls

- Charm or confuse a foe
- Leave no trace while in wolf form
- Travel between dimensions
- Fly into a lethal rage
- Devour a soul to become more powerful

Custom Move: When a Barghest tries to charm you, ROLL+WIS. On a 10+, you shrug his spell off. On a 7-9, choose 2:

- You are confused by his presence.
 - You don't want to fight it anymore.
 - You have to Defy danger before attacking it.
- On a 6-, you obey his commands.

BANSHEE

Solitary, Magical, Intelligent
Weapon Scream (d10 damage)
Range/Damage Tags Near
Special Qualities Insubstantial
Treasure d10 + 1 strange or magical item

Come away from an encounter with one of these vengeful spirits merely deaf and count yourself lucky for the rest of your peaceful, silent days. Often mistaken at first glance for a ghost or wandering spirit, the banshee reveals a far more deadly talent for sonic assault when angered. And her anger comes easy. A victim of betrayal (often by a loved one) the banshee makes known her displeasure with a roar or scream that can putrefy flesh and rend the senses. If you can help her get her vengeance, they say she might grant rewards. Whether the affection of a spurned spirit is a thing you'd want, well, that's another question. Instinct: To get revenge

- Drown out all other sound with a ceaseless scream
- Unleash a skull-splitting noise
- Disappear into the mists
- (Sense a heartbeat)

Most folk know that the undead feed on flesh. The warmth, blood and living tissue continue their unholy existence. This is true for most of the mindless dead, animated by black sorcery. Not so the devourer. When a particularly wicked person (often a manipulator of men, an apostate priest or the like) dies in a gruesome way, the dark powers of Dungeon World might bring them back to a kind of life. The devourer, however, does not feed on the flesh of men or elves. The devourer eats souls. It kills with a pleasure only the sentient can enjoy and in the moments of its victims' expiry, draws breath like a drowning man and swallows a soul. What does it mean to have your soul eaten by such a creature? None dare ask for fear of finding out. Instinct: To feast on souls

- Devour or trap dying soul
- Bargain for soul's return

As if in direct defiance of the decay and filth of the world, the gods granted us the coutal. As if to say, "there is beauty, even in this grim place." A serpent in flight on jeweled wings, these beautiful creatures glow with a soft light, as the sun does through stained glass. Bright, wise, and calm, a coutal often knows many things and sees many more. You might be able to make a trade with it in exchange for some favor. They seek to cleanse and to purge and to make of this dark world a better one. Shame we have so few. The gods are cruel.

A black dragon can be a dangerous foe. But he will be immensely more so when swamp dwellers worship him and are ready to defend him. A black dragon only reveres raw strength and power. He is also a quite cunning and treacherous foe. A hunting party will not have any problem finding a black dragon because of all the acid burns he leaves behind. But these can lead them into an ambush, though this tactic is even more common from his blue cousin. If things don't turn his way, the dragon will flee and hide in a deep pond. Instinct: To take by force

- Blind with magical darkness and attack
- Turn nature to his side by magic
- Conjure worshippers at his side
- Flee to the air or deep underwater
- Breathe cone of acid breath

Custom Move: When you face the breath of a black dragon, ROLL+DEX. On a 10+, you're safe. On a 7-9, a few acid drops touch you. Choose 1:

- Your weapons don't melt.
- Your armor is not covered with strong hot acid.
- You're not disfigured.

On a 6-, your body melts down.

Have I ever told you of the most powerful lich? When a sorcerer abandons his human nature to become an ophidian form of unlife? His ultimate goal is then to embody the corpse of a dragon and thus gain a large part of his power. You know the legend of the Order of the Un-sorcerers seeking the secret dragon cemetery as the first part of the Rise of the Dracolich Lords. Those were bitter times and this is why we, The Boneseekers, hunt for the tombs of the powerful to destroy their corpses—including dragon ones.

Instinct: To gain power

- Cast any spell
- Animate undead allies
- Dragon breath (specific type depends on dragon type)
- Seduce with the promise of power
- Reveal a scheme within a scheme

Green dragons love moderate and high temperature forests and they are the most malignant chromatic dragons. They revel in plotting nets of deceit among forest people and they enjoy seeing adversaries tear each other apart. They love to gather many slaves or "allies"—tricking them with their court games. Their opponents are killed, directly or more often indirectly. Hunting green dragons can be a dangerous game. Even though not quite loyal, their allies will tend to defend them. Not for the love of them, but for the sake of their own interest. Instinct: To plot and deceive

- Persuade someone against his allies
- Control nearby vegetation
- Force his clients to fight for him
- Interrogate a prisoner
- Breathe a cloud of chlorine gas

Custom Move: When you inhale the chlorine gas of a green dragon, ROLL+CON. On a 10+, you keep breathing. On a 7-9, you choose 1:

- You don't take -1 ongoing until your lungs are healed.
- You are not temporarily blind.
- You don't have to Defy Danger +CON to act.

On a 6-, you die suffocating.

b[2d12]+2d4, +1 strange or magical item

The blue dragon is a playful hunter. When prey enters his domain, he will first observe and ponder the threat. He will prepare an ambush, using his knowledge of the terrain and sometimes transform it into a deadly trap. Then he will lure his prey into it, play with it for hours or even days. Only then will he finish the work with his terrible lightning breath. Collecting trophies is the other pleasure a blue dragon finds in hunting. Some can be an important part of their hoard, particularly when taking on brass dragons. Instinct: To hunt for pleasure

- Take advantage of his knowledge of the terrain
- Create a convincing illusion
- Control winds and sandstorms
- Lightning Breath

Custom Move: When you face the lightning breath of a blue dragon, ROLL+CON. On a 10+, it flows harmlessly through you. On a 7-9, you are shocked and choose 2:

- Your weapons and/or armor deal b[2d8] Damage (Ignores armor) to you.
- A valuable piece of equipment turns to ashes.
- You're shocked into paralysis.

On a 6-, you're electrocuted dead.

In cold desolate regions and high mountain peaks hunt the white dragons. They are so cold blooded that moderate temperature can send them into lethargy. They are not very intelligent dragons and they tend to act instinctively and without foresight. However, they are bright enough to favor ambush to frontal assault, particularly when fighting mountain or frost giants. They are not hunters, because giants like to capture and turn them into guardians or mounts. Giants use fire as a bait because white dragons abhor it and attack anything wielding some at first sight. Instinct: To hunt

- Manipulate ice and cold
- Set up an ambush
- Swallow a frozen prey
- Breathe a cone of cold

Custom Move: When you face the freezing breath of a white dragon, ROLL+DEX. On a 10+, you dodge it. On a 7-9, you choose 2:

- You are slowed down until properly warmed up.
- One of your limb is totally frozen.
- You are frost burnt (b[2d8] damage ignores armor).

Legends say all dragons descend from the Apocalypse Dragon. Though some say they were his minions. Other stories say the Father of Dragons was a red Great Wym. And this is probably why the red dragons are so arrogant and self confident. A dragon's lust for gold and jewels is well known—the red dragon's lust is unparalleled. It is so strong a red dragon knows each piece of his hoard. Nowadays, red dragons live in high places like lonely hills towering over large plains or high mountains. More proof of their superiority complex. Instinct: To hoard treasures

- Cast a powerful destructive spell
- Choose a prey and don't give it up
- Turn a foe against his allies
- Dive from up high
- Burn those who approach it
- Breathe a cone of fire

Custom Move: When a dragon breathes his mystic fire at you, ROLL+WIS. On a 10+, you find suitable cover. On a 7-9, you dodged but choose 2 anyway:

- Your weapon melts on your hand.
- Your armor burns and leaves you breathless for a while.
- Say goodbye to your backpack.

On a 6-, you turn to ashes.

Like most metallic dragons, the bronze ones love the contact of humans. They are most fond of riddles and jokes like their copper cousins. They also crave petty challenges, among which they recognize skirmishes. They love to provoke such challenges and there is one tragic example where this led to a war. They usually live near coastlines and ports because they are heavily populated and because they love swimming. More than that, they love diving in search of treasures inside shipwrecks. Instinct: To be curious

- Manipulate the elements
- Shapeshift into a human or animal
- Let a defeated enemy live
- Breathe repulsive gas or lightning bolt

Custom Move: When you inhale the repulsive gas of a bronze dragon, ROLL+WIS. On a 10+, you don't flee. On a 7-9, you choose 1:

The brass dragons love sunbathing on hot stone beds. But when daydreaming, they are particularly vulnerable to a sneaky blue dragon attack. The second most favorite pastime of brass dragons is meeting and people or caravans and chatting with humans. They are chatty and egotistical and they love nothing more than hear themselves talking. However, offering a valuable present can help turn the discussion towards topics of interest and alliance. Brass dragons love talking so much they can take prisoners just for the discussion. Fortunately, they don't show the same love of riddles that bronze dragons do. Instinct: To indulge in idleness

- Manipulate (hot) winds and desert storms
- Summon a djinn at his side
- Bury someone neck high and interrogate
- Parlay with riddles or gossip
- Breathe a cloud of sleeping gas or heated air

Custom Move: When you face the sleeping gas of a brass dragon, ROLL+INT. On a 10+, you shake it off. On a 7-9, you choose 1:

When teaming up against evil, a gold dragon will be a better ally than a silver one. He is more powerful and more vindictive against evil. However, he can be so blinded with hate that he would miscalculate his opponent's intentions. They always closely protect those they work with and they will negotiate before using violence. Similarly, they will use all their magical arsenal before anything else. Gold dragons often live in isolated areas or far-flung parts of the world. They are wise and benevolent and will help people if asked selflessly, particularly when an evil dragon is involved. Instinct: To fight evil

- Cast a rare or powerful spell
- Rally allies
- Negotiate a term of agreement
- Find a non-violent solution
- Protect his allies
- Breathe a cone of fire or weakening gas

Custom Move: When you inhale the weakening gas of a gold dragon, ROLL+CON. On a 10+, you shake the weakness off. On a 7-9, choose 2:

- Your weapon falls from your hands.
 - Your Strength temporarily falls by 3.
 - You are hardly able to fight.

While the bronze dragon is quite a good sport at jokes or riddle challenges, the copper dragon is a sore loser. They definitely favor being the only one making jokes, tricks, or asking riddles. This is more than a bad habit, it's also clearly a way to test people. All in all, it's worth getting to know them. They do indeed make great allies (building and maintaining city defenses for example.) Most copper dragons show a marked preference for high plateaus and mountain areas where they compete with red or white dragons for lairs and hunting grounds. Instinct: To make (bad) jokes

- Push a foe into mud, transform it into stone
- Manipulate the earth elements
- Mock his enemies
- Jump out of reach
- Breathe an acid cloud or slowing gas

Custom Move: When you face the slowing gas breath of a copper dragon, ROLL+DEX. On a 10+, you're safe. On a 7-9, you suffer -3 to DEX until you rest. On a 6-, you can not run or move quickly and suffer -3 to DEX until you rest.

Silver dragons are the worst enemy of red dragons and they often compete for the best lairs and hoards. Silver dragons are not the strongest, not at all, but they are more social and they team with others to kill a red dragon and share his treasure. They are benevolent and helpful to humanoids. Many are known to have befriended a human and lived a life beside him. Though there always were some times when he would disappear for a while, living his dragon life. A silver dragon can be a powerful ally to answer an evil threat.

- Instinct:* To get close to humans
- Walk on/through clouds
 - Team up with humans for the greater good
 - Take the shape of a human or of an animal
 - Breathe a cone of cold or a cloud of paralyzing gas
 - Reverse gravity, then catch falling foes

Custom Move: When you inhale the paralyzing gas of a silver dragon, ROLL+CON. On a 10+, you keep going. On a 7-9, you choose 1:

Their grand kingdoms wage war upon one another in the name of freedom of will. Some wizards bind them with powerful spells to do the wizards' bidding which is more like slave work to efreeti eyes. No wonder the efreeti one meets are very angry and will do whatever they deem necessary to reclaim their freedom and return to their fiery plane. Instinct: To unbind the spells that bind them

In the cities of the southern waste, there is a marketplace where one can find the most beautiful and purest gems.

They are called the Shaitan's Eyes in memory of the tale of Madibagda and the twenty genies. Madibagda was a powerful mage who summoned shaitans and had them killed by skillful monster hunters to trade the gems found on their remains. Then came the day the pasha of the unfortunate shaitans answered the call. He used his power over the earth elements to turn Madibagda and his hunters into statues and trade them for the gems of his kin. Instinct: To go back to their plane

Appearing differently to each victim, this summoned creature has but a single purpose: to wrap its victim up in binding coils and take it away to a place of torment. Sometimes it will come as a man-shaped mass of rusting iron, hooks and coils of mismatched links. Other times, a roiling tangle of rope or kelp or twisted bloody bedsheets. You never get away with murder. Not really. You might evade the law, might escape your own conscience in the end and die, fat and happy in a mansion somewhere. When the gods themselves notice your misdeeds, though, that's where your luck runs out and a mohrg is born. The mohrg is a skeleton—flesh and skin and hair all rotted away. All but their guts—their twisted, knotted guts still spill from their bellies, magically preserved and often wrapped, noose-like, about their necks. They do not think, exactly, but they suffer. They kill and wreak havoc and their souls do not rest. Such is the punishment, both on them for the crime and on all mankind for daring to murder one another. The gods are just and they are harsh. Instinct: To wreak havoc

Special Qualities

Treasure
d6, +1 thing not of this earth

I once stumbled into this remote village where people looked kind of sick to me. They asked for my help and those strange red creatures burst out of corners to attack me. They were no match for me and I thought I had saved the people. But they told me I would know in time. That night they all began to suffer unbearably and hundreds of small red creatures hatched from their bodies. It took me all night to clean this nightmare and I left a dead village behind. My worst night ever. Instinct: To perpetuate and conquer

- Hide between dimensions
- Implant a paralyzed prey with an egg
- Coordinate fight to isolate a prey
- Escape into other dimensions with implanted prey

Custom Move: When you are implanted with xill eggs, ROLL+CON. On a 10+, your body rejects the eggs. On a 7-9, choose 1:

- A few eggs don't escape the purge.
- You don't feel sick for 90 days.
- You don't take -1 until all eggs are purged.

On a 6-, you'll die in 90 days when the eggs hatch.

Special Qualities
Powerful wings

Treasure
d10 +1d4

When you meet a wyvern you know why this beast inspired most of the scary winged serpent legends and myths. A hideous head with jaws full of sharp teeth, a long wriggling scaly body, large bat-like wings and a long, pointy, venomous sting. It is as quick as it is large, and as wild as it is cold blooded. When it dives from the sky, you can be sure it is for a kill. If its primary prey escapes, it will turn to an unwary one. While soaring away, it will sting it to death. Instinct: To care for its fledglings

- Pierce with its poison sting
- Swoop down on prey
- Release them from incredible heights
- Fly away at full speed
- Bite a victim in half
