Make sure you pay close attention to the cut and score lines for the chimney, it is easy to confuse which tab belongs to which side (see above in yellow circle.)

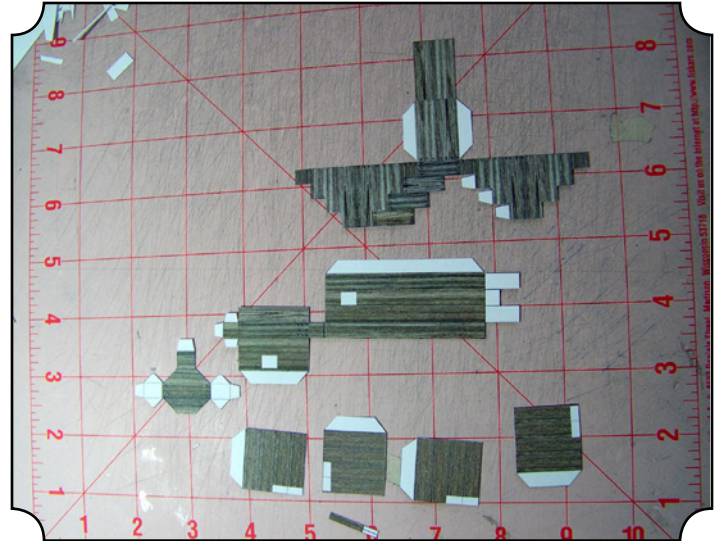

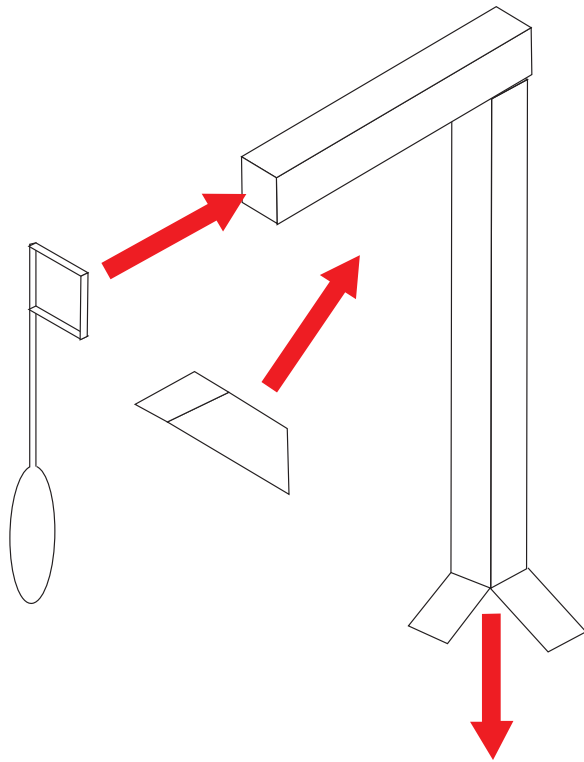

Fold and glue the anvil printout in half before cutting the individual pieces.

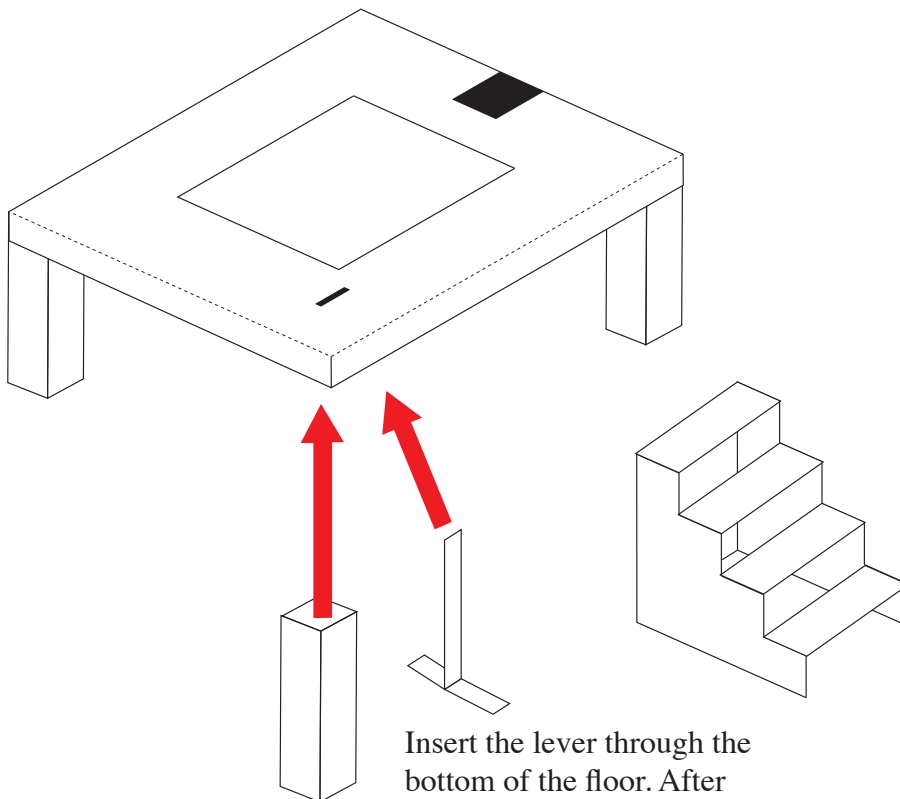

The table and water barrel are both one-piece assemblies. Make sure you glue the barrel into a tube first (long tab) and then glue the top and leave the bottom for last.

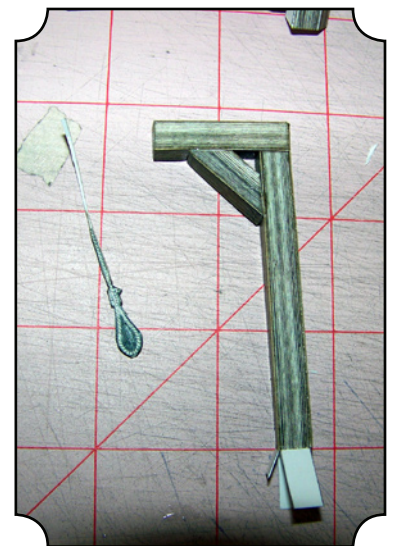

The four main sections for the blacksmith's model.

Cut and score the stairs, legs and gallows posts as shown above.

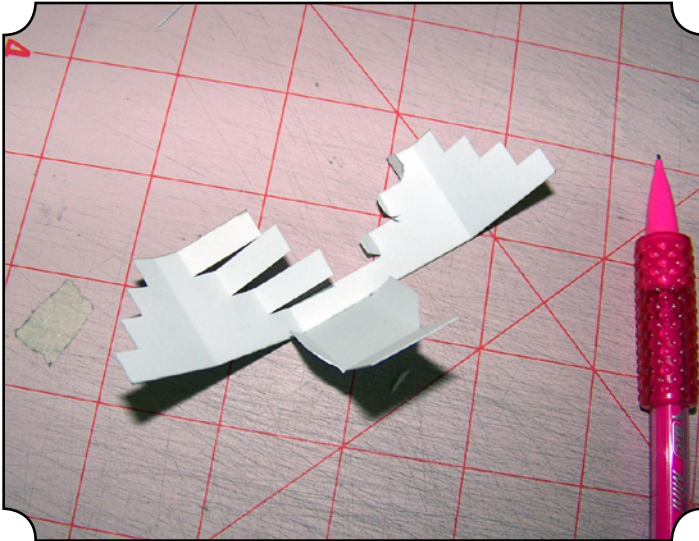

Insert the lever through the bottom of the floor. After you glue it into place, we recommend you place a piece of tape over the tabs to further reinforce it.

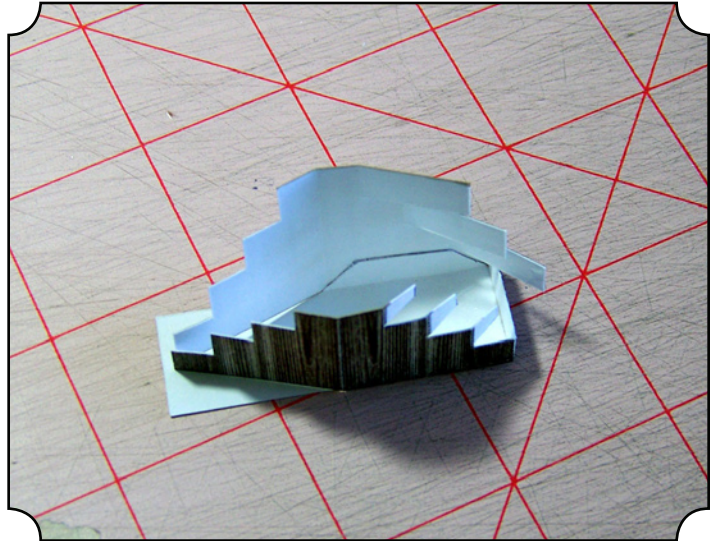

The completed post and noose.

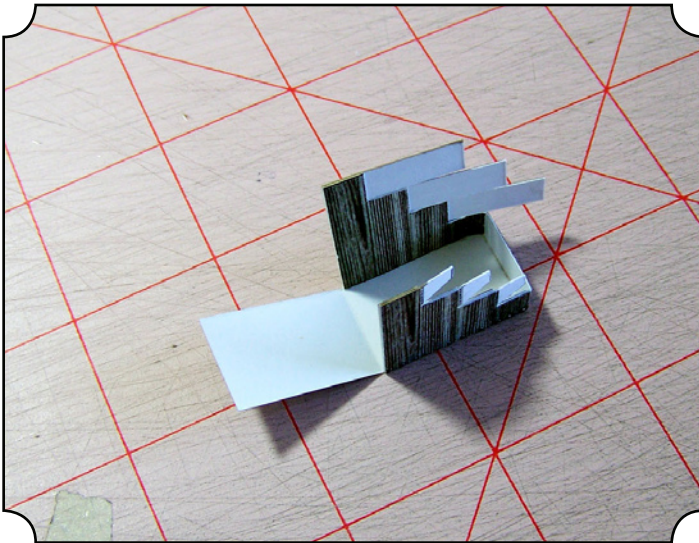

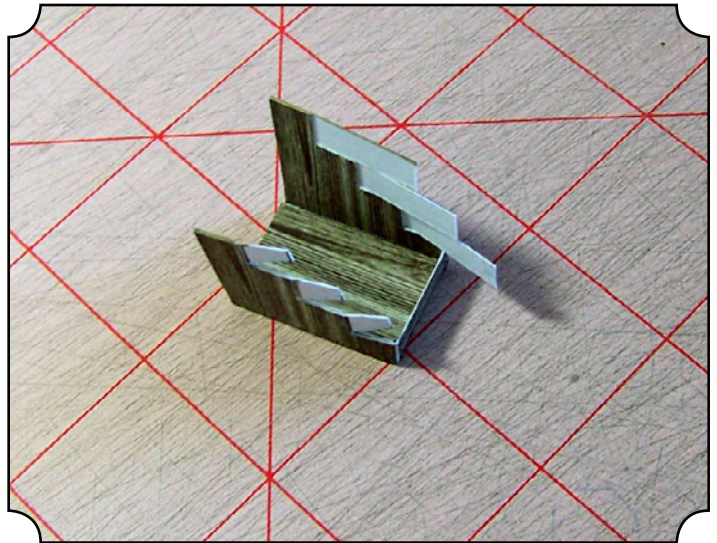

1: Cut and score the gallows stairs as shown.

2: Glue the rear panel to the side panels as depicted.

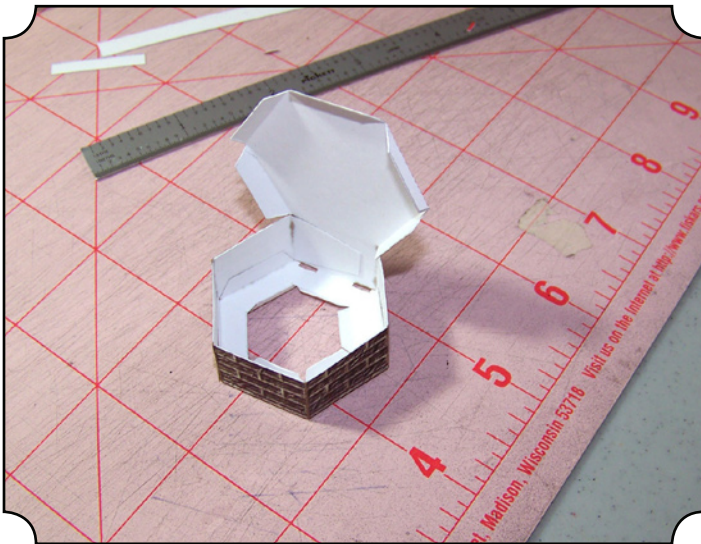

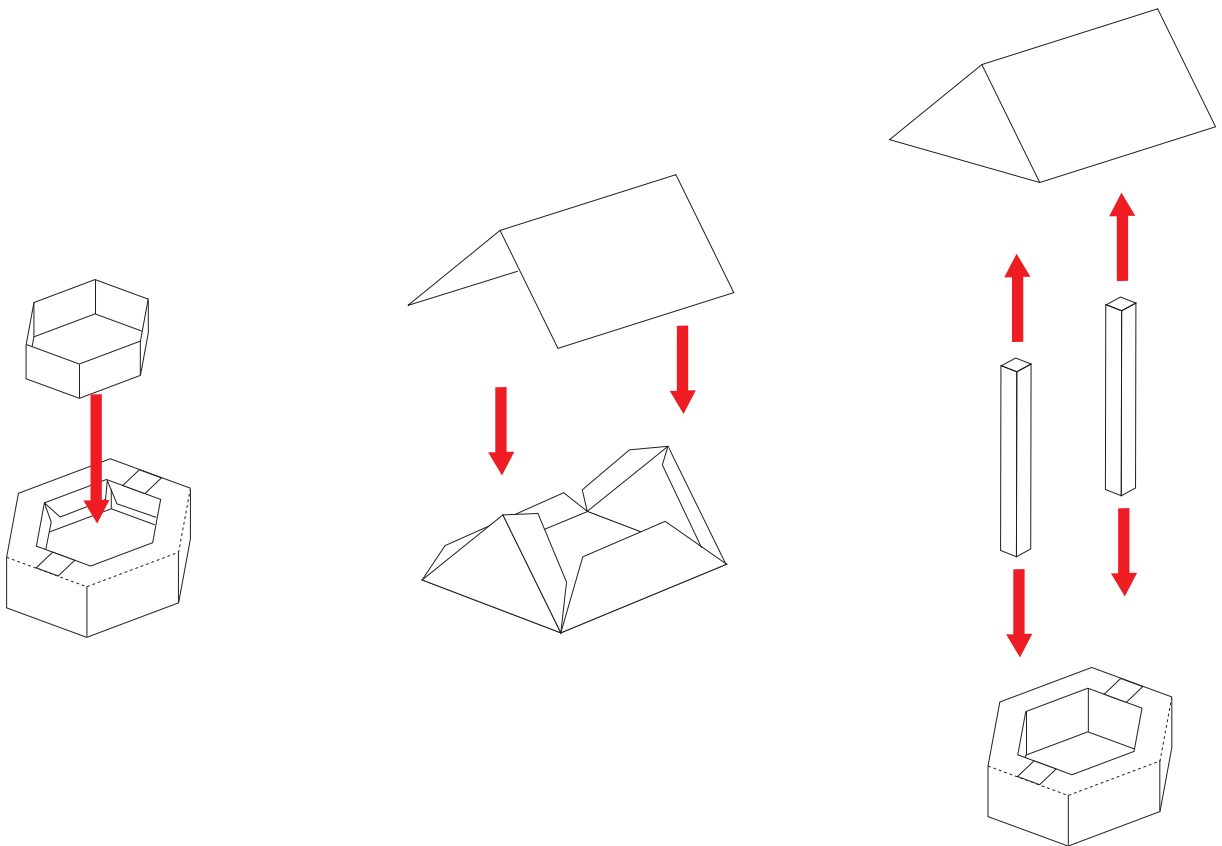

3: Fold in the inner side panels as shown and glue into place.

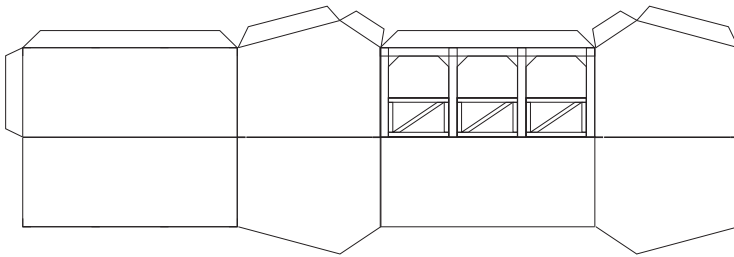

4: Fold in the inner rear panel and glue. Once this is dry glue the stair treads into place.

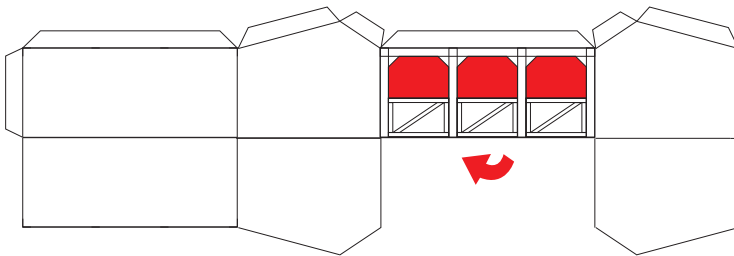

When making the outer well section, glue the outer wall into a circle first and allow to dry. Flip over and glue the top flap while placing it on a flat surface to ensure it is flush with the top wall edge. Finish by gluing the bottom flap into place.

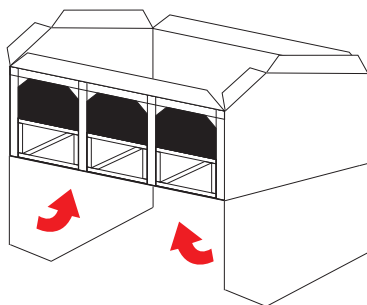

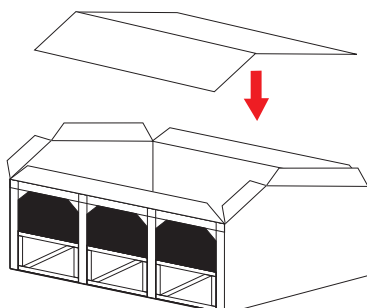

1: Glue the four wall sections for the stable as shown.

2: If you wish to cut out the black sections of the stall openings (shown in red) flip and glue the inner wall for the front section as shown, allow to dry and then cut them out before proceeding to step 3.

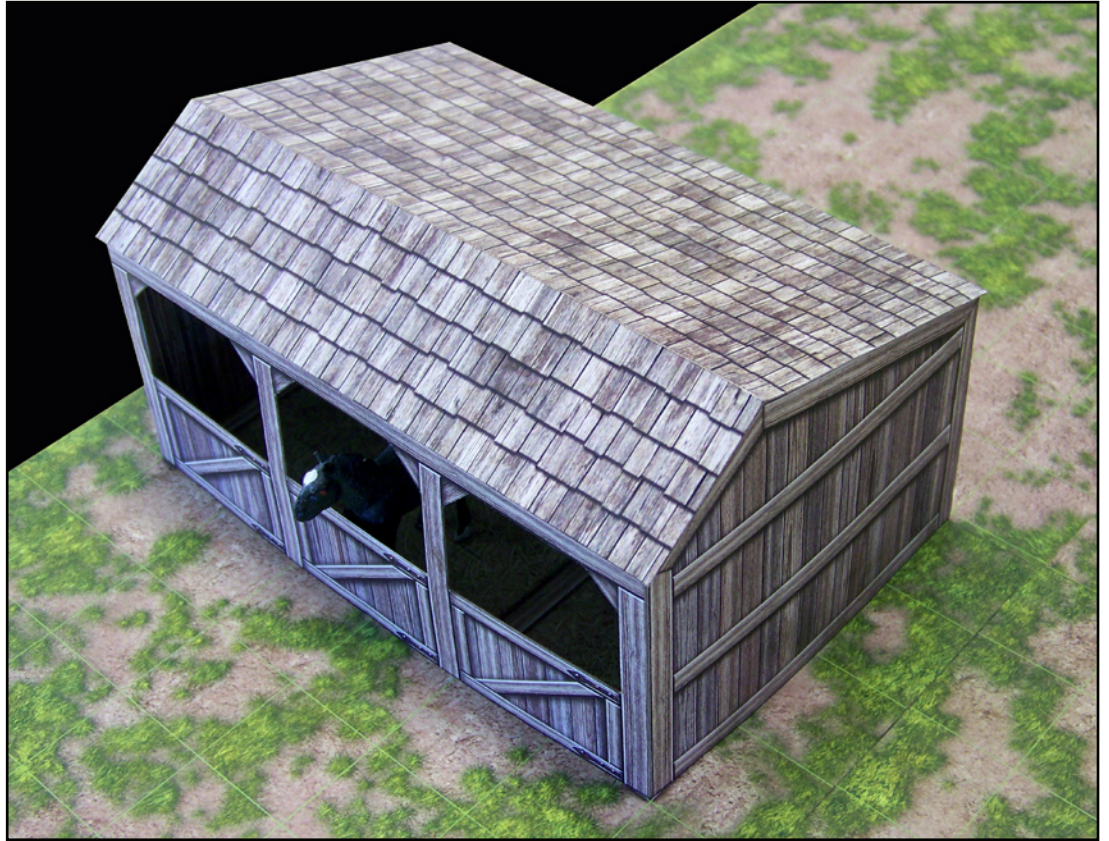

3: Glue the two wall ends together forming a square and allow to dry. Proceed to fold and glue the remaining interior wall sections into place as shown.

4: Glue the roof section into place. Before doing this, we recommend coloring the bottom perimeter with a gray, brown or black marker as a short amount will overhang the stable wall edges.
