Tired of the material life? Want something more than every physical whim gratified? Then a trip to the monastery is what you need! Learn about history, philosophy and magic. Learn how to spin wool and weed gardens. See how experienced clerics deal with armed invasion. Get into more trouble than you bargained for...

One of the more interesting things about living in Tsolyánu is what you can find by digging holes in the ground. Digging in a barren section of back country and discovering ancient Engsványali warnings not to dig any further, is what makes archaeology more excitement than you bargained for...

An ancient land, gods and demons and mysteries half an aeon old, an esoteric theology that leads across the millenia to other planes and dimensions no human has ever seen...

At the very end of the Bednálljan Age, when Tékumel had become sated with endless strife, a priest named Pavár dwelt upon the Isle of Gánga in the warm southern sea. His insights into the natures both of humans and of the immensely powerful other-planar beings who rule Tékumel's universe as "gods" brought about the creation of a cosmology that has endured twice ten thousand years. From his writings arise the sects and practices and doctrines that govern the societies of Tékumel today.

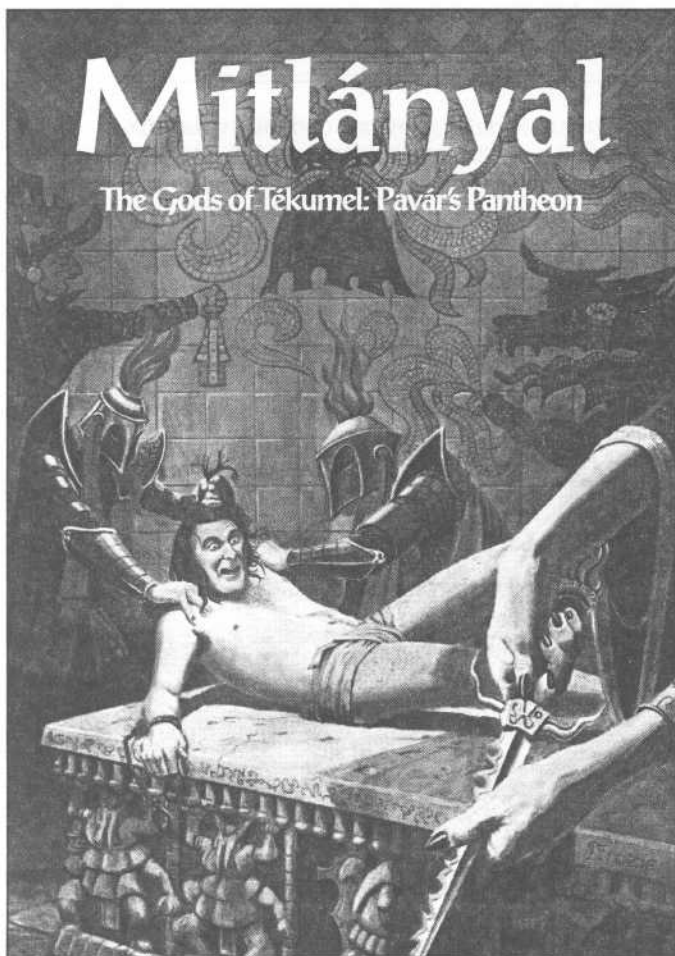

"Fall upon your faces," cry the priests. "Worship, for all humanity is less than a nest of Dri-ants before the almighty gods! Serve the gods, make sacrifice, erect temples, and heed their every command! Ritual is power! Dogma is all! Obedience is humanity's ultimate goal! Humility is perfection! The gods are the players; we are the pawns!"

Yet there are those who question, those who are not satisfied, those who thirst to know more...

This book describes the curious religion of Pavár. If you love strange worlds and stranger philosophies, then read and enjoy.
