Background: Very little information is available on the ninja known only as "Moonshadow". He first appeared on the scene approximately five years ago, and restricted his operations to mainland Japan, where he reportedly carried out a number of murders for several warring Yakuza families. The only thing that is known is that once he accepts a contract, he will not stop until that contract is fulfilled. Japanese police reports state that witnesses saw him seemingly appear from nowhere, in the middle of a crowded room, cut his way through several heavily armed body guards, kill his target, then simply "vanish" into the shadows.

Powers: Moonshadow is a highly skilled ninja assassin with several other abilities. He can cloud the minds of his targets, rendering them unable to detect his presence, until he is ready to strike. He can detect weakness in most physical structures allowing him to strike at the point that will do the most damage, and he can blend into the shadows allowing him to conceal his movements. His speed and accuracy with his weapons is almost superhuman. His agility is at peak human levels, and very, very hard to hit. He normally makes use of classic ninja weapons, smoke and flash bombs, poisons, and various gases. He is also an expert at disguising his identity. In the past he has appeared as a businessman, a poor farmer, a police officer, and a crippled old man.

Tactics: Moonshadow prefers to remain in the shadows, rarely if ever attacking an opponent outright. He will observe his target for several days trying to gain information on him. If possible, he will assume the identity of a trusted figure (police, para-medical, etc.), so that he can get close to his target. Once he is within range he will use his weakness detection before striking. If all else fails, he also has access to several slow working poisons, that are designed to weaken his targets or powders that can blind them. Feel free to use your imagination when coming up with possible inventions.

Personality/Character Traits: Moonshadow is extremely loyal to his employers. Once he takes a contract, he will not stop until that contract is fulfilled.
