Made in the U.S.A.

This is a standard RPGA Network tournament. A four-hour time block has been set aside for this event. Begin by passing out the player characters; pass them out based on class only, not revealing gender or race. Instruct the players to leave the character sheets face down until you have read the introduction. Then, tell them to study their character sheets, select spells, and notify you when they are ready to begin the adventure.

It is a good idea to ask each player to put a name tag in front of him or her. The tag should have the player's name at the bottom, and the character's name, race, and gender at the top. This makes it easier for the players to keep track of who is playing which character.

The actual playing time will be about three hours. Make sure you use the last 20 to 30 minutes of the event time block to have the players capsulize their characters for each other and vote. The standard RPGA Network voting procedures will be used. Make sure you have finished voting before you collect the players' voting sheets. This way you will not be influenced by their votes and comments.

The players are free to use the game rules to learn about equipment and weapons their characters are carrying.

A note about the text: Some of the text in this scenario is written so that you may present it as written to the players, while other text is for your eyes only. Text for the players will be in bold italics. It is strongly recommended that you paraphrase the player text, instead of reading it aloud, as some of the text is general and must be adapted to the specific situation or to actions of the player characters.

This ALTERNITY® adventure takes place in the postapocalyptic GAMMA WORLD Campaign Setting. It requires a copy of GAMMA WORLD to play.

The adventure is set near Mount Rainier, the major volcanic mountain near Seattle. The mountain is reputed to have erupted during the Cataclysm, and still rumbles from time to time.

Players' Introduction

Gamma Terra!

You feel your heart pound as you steel yourself for adventure among the radiation-soaked landscape. Mutants and androids and giant hairy creatures heck, that's you guys. And you're flat-out normal compared to what's out there.

For your first mission since being told you were adventurers, you've set out from Mineral, the free town at the base of the Rainy Mountains. Mineral's just what it sounds like: rough, hard, and downright boring. Folks there do little but watch blurry videotapes of Ancient heroic documentaries and hope for a better tomorrow. Like I said, bo-ring.

But you don't plan to be bored long, because ahead lies Big Rainy, the colossal mountain that still smolders from its reign of destruction generations ago. Maybe it'll erupt while you're there, maybe not. That's what adventure's all about.

You've passed the way station of Elbow and have just forded through the thoroughly pillaged ghost town of Ash. Ahead you see the base of the glacier on the south side of the mountain, where you've been told to scout for signs of civilization. As far as you know, no one has tried to survive the glacier before. Even though the summer winds blow across the land, you have secured winter clothes and provisions to brave the glacier. Hey, you may be thrill-seekers, but you don't intend to be cold thrill-seekers.

Anyhow, you hope to find a settlement or a ranger station or maybe even an evil faction of anti-mutant supremacists. Anything to get out of Mineral for a while.

Gamemaster's Information

The young heroes walk toward the mountain. If they want more ordinary equipment, give it to them within reason (snowshoes yes, laser rifle no).

The heroes each have red Gore-Tex snow parkas with letters on the back. A successful Knowledge ancient language skill check reveals the letters as "REI." An Amazing success indicates that "REI" means "king" in a forgotten language (Portuguese), suggesting the heroes are kings. Regardless, the parkas give a -2 step bonus to Stamina skill checks involving cold.

Encounters 1, 2, and 3 occur as the heroes approach the frozen town of Longmire. Each encounter occurs when the heroes reach any point in the appropriately numbered arc. Encounter 4 is the frozen town of Longmire, and encounter 5 is a jumping-off point for future adventures.

Nothing happens till the heroes reach the base of the glacier. The glacier is a flat sheet of ice that reflects the sun with a painful glare. The heroes face a danger of snowblindness, though this may not be apparent till later. Every three hours on the glacier, anyone without sunglasses or other eye protection (or anyone with Photosensitivity) makes an Awareness—perception skill check. Failure means the hero gets a cumulative +1 penalty to all skill checks affected by vision (up to +3). This penalty does not go away till the hero takes an hour to rest or leaves the glacier.

In addition, every three hours on the glacier, the heroes should each make a Stamina—endurance skill check (or, if the player desires, a Survival—arctic skill check) modified by the parka bonuses. Failure means that the hero suffers d4+1s from the cold. This damage will not heal until the hero is in a warm place.

O Snowbunnies

The foothills of Big Rainy are easily mounted, with the bright sun beating down on the heroes. However, a mist sets in which does little to change the brightness, but does limit vision to only about 100 meters. It takes about an hour to go one square (4 kilometers) on the glacier.

At the arc marked by 1, the heroes hear a series of quick skidding noises when they reach a point in this arc. They soon are surrounded by quickly moving creatures called schusses, 18 in all. Schusses are small, inoffensive, and highly curious mutated white rabbits. They have very thick fur and extended footpads that resemble four small skis. They are omnivorous and hunt for food in packs. They never attack anything much larger than themselves, even in packs. They use their Confusion mutation as a defense, usually to cover their escape.

These snowbunnies look hungry. They dart around the heroes for as long as they are interested, which will be until any are killed, scared off by a loud noise, or bored after 20 minutes of game time. If any schuss is fed, they all crowd in for food. If this occurs, several dart off to the site of encounter 4 at top speed.

2 Yexils

The second non-location-specific encounter is with two vexils. This mated pair is after food, specifically synthetic clothing. They alight from the sky on both sides of the party, claiming the heroes have what they want. If the heroes don't know the yexils' particular diet, the yexils point at their bodies. The yexils want the parkas, and attack if they are not appeased. If the heroes hand over all their parkas, the yexils go in peace (and the heroes go without a bonus against the cold).

If the heroes fork over some synthetic clothing other than the parkas, the male yexil can be satisfied, but the female is very picky about what she eats, accepting only designer label designs. She has learned to recognize "quality" styles by scent. Her mate is not so choosy, but is always trying to please his wife. He will eat rags so that she can get the most succulent morsel. His wife has come to expect nothing less.

The yexils roost in the satellite dish in encounter 4. They know of the hoop who lives there, but generally leave him alone. They will not say they're afraid of the hoop, but careful heroes may discern that they are.

Snow Snake

A little bit before this crevasse, each hero gets an Awareness-perception skill check to see the white-onwhite chasm. Only a Good or Amazing success reveals existence the crevasse's (and don't forget snowblindness penalties). The fissure in the glaciertop is three meters wide. Heroes that do not see the crevasse must roll a success on an Acrobatics-dodge skill check to avoid falling in. Those that fail, or those that jump in after those that fail, must succeed in an Acrobatics-fall skill check to avoid suffering Extremely Short Fall damage upon hitting the bottom 4 meters down. (The schusses know where the crevasse is, and leap across on their skis. The far side is a bit lower than the near one, so the snowbunnies rarely miss their leap.)

In the fissure is a slither, a snow snake that is camouflaged against the ice. Slithers are large white snakes that have grown fur to adapt to the cold. They are rarely found in numbers outside their lairs, in which case a mated pair with children is not unknown. Snow snakes attack anything that moves, but retreat if seriously wounded.

This snake tries to get surprise, with a +2 penalty to opponents' Awareness—perception skill checks because of the camouflage. It relishes the opportunity to eat anything other than the rare falling snowbunny.

4 Longmire Lookout

The ancient town of Longmire is flash frozen beneath the glacier. All buildings of up to three stories are completely encased in ice. However, one building pokes out through the ice. The superglacial portion was once the office of a sporting goods chain. Now it is home to a hoop, the feared mutated bunny rabbit of Gamma Terra.

As the heroes reach Longmire, they should make Awareness—intuition skill checks. Success indicates the generally flat glacier is bumpy in spots. Clearing away the snow reveals the ghostly image of a town beneath the ice. It would require months of chipping to reach the buildings.

About this point, the heroes should encounter a small pack of schusses, three or four at most. The snowbunnies have a far shorter attention span than the last clutch, suggesting that they are not as hungry as those previously encountered. Indeed, the hoop fed them recently, so they stay only a minute or so before speeding away.

The structure previously sighted should be distinct now. A brick and wood building seems to float atop the ice, though it doesn't take a genius to deduce that some floors may be below. All the windows are boarded over. On the roof is a large metal structure, which might be a sculpture.

The roof structure is a huge satellite dish that now serves as the yexils' nesting place. There are shreds of polyester here and there, perhaps suggesting the residents might be home soon.

Also on the roof is a door to the lower levels. The door is made of rubber, and thus is easily pried open and resealed. This door has been trapped by the hoop, as detailed below. Near the door is a small rope chain connected to a set of jingle bells. The schusses pull the chain when they bring food for the hoop. If the chain is pulled, the hoop cautiously pokes his head through the door a minute later, rifle in hand. If he finds a schuss with food, he'll pat it on the head. If he finds curious heroes, he'll blast them with his rifle.

Entering the building: The heroes may come in through one of the windows or through the roof door. The boards can be removed with a Strength feat check. Inside, the hoop has placed tin cans above all the windows. If the boards are removed, the hoop hears it and pinpoints the heroes' location.

The roof door entrance is trapped (see below). The door at the bottom of the stairs is a normal swinging door.

The top floor: This uppermost floor contains 20 rooms. A portable generator keeps the lights working at 1/3 normal brightness, leaving deep shadows everywhere. When the descriptions say "standard office items," this means an inoperative computer, a desk, a chair, a telephone, books, and other items commonly found in offices.

1. Stairwell to roof: This area is trapped. Any hero stepping on the first step causes the pin to fall away from a tear gas grenade five stairs down. The grenade explodes ten seconds after the first hero enters. If both doors to the stairwell are closed, the poison doesn't dissipate for six minutes, but if either door is open, the gas vanishes after one action round. (A tear gas grenade's smoke lasts for d8+4 rounds. It provides a +2 step penalty to all attacks and Awareness skill checks, and requires a Constitution feat check. A Critical Failure causes helplessness, Failure a +3 penalty, Ordinary a +2 penalty, Good a +1 penalty, and Amazing no penalty. All effects of the tear gas last for 2d4 rounds.)

2. Lavatories: The west is for men, the east for women. A computer, books, and other supplies have been moved into the east lavatory from room 4.

3. Vice president's lavatory: Not a pretty sight.

4. Vice president's office: The hoop usually stays in this room. Here he has stockpiled 20 tear gas grenades, 55 energy cells, 2 Bowie knives, and an open box of 85 clips each of 50 shots for his assault rifle. The hoop has moved all the office items out of the room except the desk, which is clearly his bed.

5. Projection room: In addition to several dozen fixed chairs and a screen, this room contains a portable cell-powered movie projector. When the hoop uses this to blind, it requires a Good or Amazing success on an Awareness—intuition skill check to avoid blindness entirely. An Ordinary success means the victim is blinded for the next round, and a Failure means the victim is blinded for two rounds. Blinded individuals have a +3 step penalty to all actions, and give opponents a -3 step bonus to hit them.

6. Executive conference room: A lectern, a long table, a burned out overhead projector, and several chairs are in here.

7. Conference room adjunct: A table and four chairs are in here.

8. President's office: Among the standard office items, there is a stun ray pistol with 1 charge in the desk drawer. An unloaded air rifle is on the desk, as well as a set of golf clubs (as clubs but -1 damage), several dozen baseball hats, and a ping pong ball shooter with 4 balls loaded (d4–2s/d4s/d4+1s). By the door is a tennis ball firing machine which the hoop has rigged to fire all its balls in three actions. Anyone caught in the hail of tennis balls takes 2d6s per action therein. The range of the tennis ball machine is 20 meters.

9. President's lavatory: Unused for many years.

10. Sales office: Just standard office items.

11. Elevators: All the doors are closed. An Amazing success on an Athletics skill check is required to pry an elevator door open. Nothing is inside the elevators except a long drop.

12. Stairwell to lower floors: The floor below is not frozen through. The lower level is inhabited by a nasty bunch of killer schusses, whom the hoop has tried to kill off without much success. About a dozen of the 50 or so killer schusses line the stairs to the top floor. They attack anything that moves. Treat these are normal schusses except they have Strength 6, Durability  $\frac{8}{4/4}$ , and bite  $\frac{8}{4/2}$  for  $\frac{4-1}{\frac{4}{4}}$ .

13. Lobby: A tripwire spans the entrance to this room. A Good or Amazing success on an Awareness perception skill check spots the wire (with a +2 step penalty to the check if the hero is running). If not spotted and avoided, the wire drops a bag of barbells on the hero, causing an Acrobatics—dodge skill check. The barbells deliver 2d4+2w/d4+2w/d4+4s/d4-2s of LI damage. Other than that, the room has an ornate desk and waiting areas, plus lots of ancient magazines. The elevator doors across from the open entrance requires a successful Knowledge—artifact knowledge skill check for a hero to perceive them as anything but a wall.

14. Conference room: Similar to, but not as well appointed as, room 6.

15. Sport rifle division: In addition to standard office items, the room contains four air rifles, four cases of 12 clips each with 20 duralloy slugs for the air rifles, one assault rifle (carried by the hoop), and one unopened box of 100 clips each of 50 shots for the assault rifle.

16: Equipment division: Standard items, plus 16 baseball bats (clubs +1 damage), 15 golf clubs (clubs – 1 damage), 20 baseballs, and a tennis racket (club –2 damage).

17. Uniforms division: This room contains 12 dozen polyester and cotton garments. The hoop commonly appeases the yexils with these.

18. Accessories division: This room has, among standard items, two catcher's masks (d4-1/0/0), six football helmets (d4/d4-3/0), over a hundred baseball caps and a spare catcher's chest padding (d6-3/d4-3/d4-2).

19. Legal department: Standard office items.

20. Marketing office: Standard items, plus a case of 60 titanium bats (clubs +1 damage).

THE HOOP'S TACTICS

The hoop has lived in the sporting goods headquarters for some time, and can prove a wily combatant therein. In addition to what he carries, he has access to many other non-traditional weapons throughout the building.

If the heroes surprise the hoop, he is in room 4 with his assault rifle nearby. He fires one or two rounds at the heroes and then breaks a window to the outside. He then tries to escape.

If the heroes set off the tear gas grenade, the hoop grabs his rifle and runs down the corridor to point A. When the first hero breaks through from the stairwell, the hoops fires at him or her, causing a +2 step penalty to avoid surprise. He then retreats into room 5, picks up the projector, and positions himself at point B. When the heroes reach any point in his line of sight, he tries to blind them and gain another surprise attack with his rifle. He then runs to the president's office (8) and point C, and fires the tennis ball machine when the heroes get into his line of fire down the corridor leading south from room 4. He then moves to point D and tries to lead heroes into the stairwell down (12) by leaving the door open, allowing killer schusses below to attack. He then alternates between grenades and bullets, always trying to stay far out of the heroes' reach.

If the hoop is drawn outside by the bell chain, he fires on the heroes once and tries to retreat down the stairs, carefully avoiding triggering the gas grenade. He will then act as above or however circumstances best dictate. Don't forget the hoop's last resort point!

You and Bo are impetuous and fun-loving, but Bo can get himself into trouble without thinking. You always look to your Uncle Jesse, a mutated raccoon, for advice and leadership. You would stop at nothing to protect your teenage cousin Daisy, a lizard woman. Your best friend is a mechanic named Cooter, who is at least part machine himself. Not long ago, you and Bo followed the haunting sound of a banjo in the woods near Mineral, and brought back to town a shy but wise sasquatch who calls himself the Balladeer. You six have formed a new adventuring party to explore the mountain, and you can't wait to get out there in the wide, wild world.

Description: age 41, 1 meter tall, 40 kg, stocky, brown and black striped fur, masked green eyes Moral Attitude: Ethical Motivation: Yearn to Learn Traits: Leader, Calm Biography: You're a dabber, a mutated raccoon-man. You live in a town called Mineral, where you mentor a pair of brothers named Luke and Bo. Luke, an unmutated human, is more level-headed than the younger Bo, a mutant. You also supervise their teenage cousin Daisy, a lizard woman, who seems innocent but still manages to get herself in precarious situations. You have recently found a new friend named the Balladeer, a sasquatch who is as deft with his banjo as his massive claws. And the boys have taken up with a kind android named Cooter, whose technical knowledge is impressive. Since the younger folks keep running afoul of the corrupt government here in Mineral, you've organized an expedition to the mountain to keep the lot out of trouble.

You live with your wise uncle Jesse, a raccoon man, in the town of Mineral. There, some local corrupt government officials have taken a shine to you—not a pretty thought. You just know you didn't do anything to encourage them. Thankfully, you're backed up by your cousins Luke, a pure strain human, and Bo, a mutated human. Your cousins introduced you to a polite android named Cooter, and a friendly sasquatch who calls himself the Balladeer. Because of your run-ins with the government here in Mineral, Uncle Jesse has planned a trip to the mountains till things cool down. Sounds like fun!

Description: age 26, 1.6 meters tall, 80 kg, stocky, brown-grey hair, squinty brown eyes

Attributes: Helping Others Moral Attitude: Worldly Traits: Helpful, Humble Biography: You're an android who lives in a town called Mineral. You like it here, because the locals bring you all sorts of strange devices with which you can tinker. This put you in contact with a wise old dabber named Uncle Jesse, who raised three very different children: Daisy, an attractive lizard woman; her cousin Luke, a well-adjusted normal human; and Luke's brother Bo, an impetuous but guileless mutated human. You can be all fun and games with the boys, though you're always polite to Daisy. Through them, you've met a friendly sasquatch who calls himself the Balladeer, and have even fixed his banjo. Uncle Jesse asked you to leave your trinket shop to come to the Big Rainy Mountains, to give his kids a fighting chance out there in the wilderness.

Attributes: Deeper Meaning Moral Attitude: Honorable Traits: Cheerful, Talkative Biography: You're a sasquatch from a forest near a town named Mineral. For years you stayed from urban dwellers, who knew you by soulful melodies you played on your banjo, but never saw you—some even said you were a myth. But two young brothers, a human named Luke and a mutant named Bo, found you and convinced you to try civilization. Oddly, it was delightful, as the locals thrilled to your songs. You have begun to chronicle the exploits of Bo and Luke, as well as their delightful cousin Daisy, a lizard woman. You have struck a friendship with their guardian, an older raccoon named Uncle Jesse. You even have learned to trust a likeable piece of technology, a mechanized tinkerer named Cooter. And now that Jesse has asked you to attend an expedition into the wilds, you feel certain that even more inspiration will soon grace your songs.
