VARIANT MULTICLASSING RULES

VARIANT MULTICLASSING

Under the core rules, multiclassing can lead to a wide disparity in character ability. With this system, each character can choose a secondary class at 1st level that she trains in throughout her career, without giving up levels in her primary class. Once selected, this choice is permanent (though if using the retraining rules from Paizo's Pathfinder Roleplaying Game Ultimate Campaign, the secondary class can be retrained by paying half the cost of retraining all her class levels). A character that selects this option doesn't gain feats at 3rd, 7th, 11th, 15th, and 19th levels, but instead gains class features from her secondary class as described in the table below. It is probably a good idea to use either this variant system or normal multiclassing, but it is possible for the two systems to be used together. In a game using both systems, a character can't take levels in the secondary class she gains from this variant.

Variant multiclassing can also be used to grant some limited class-based abilities to monsters, treating the monster's hit dice as its character level and swapping out the appropriate number of feats in return for secondary class features. The monster cannot swap out feats it is using as prerequisites for feats it retains. Using the variant multiclassing rules for monsters does not affect the monster's CR. Another option for giving monsters some class abilities can be found in The Genius Guide to Simple Class Templates for Monsters.

VARIANT PRESTIGE CLASSING

Under the core rules, taking levels in prestige classes can lead to a wide disparity in character ability. With this system, each character can choose a prestige class at 5th level that she trains in throughout her career, without giving up levels in her primary class. Once selected, this choice is permanent (though if using the retraining rules from Pathfinder Roleplaying Game Ultimate Campaign, the prestige class can be retrained by paying half the cost of retraining all her class levels). A character that selects this option doesn't gain feats at 5th, 9th, 13th, and 17th levels, but instead gains class features from her prestige class as described in the table below. It is probably a good idea to use either this variant system or normal prestige classing, but it is possible for the two systems to be used together. In a game using both systems, a character can't take levels in the prestige class she gains from this variant. A character must meet the requirements listed in the prestige class's entry below in order to take prestige class features.
