

Eldred Heavy Cruiser

Eldred Heavy Cruisers are typically used to command task forces and larger fleets: these ships are used to interdict large pirate operations and provide Command and Control for military campaigns. The Admiralty often sends a Heavy Cruiser to take over peacekeeping in border systems when the local defense forces have proven insufficient.

Heavy Cruiser
During the Eldred Slavern war, the fleet suffered from a lack of heavy warships. The wartime fleet was comprised of purpose built patrol ships along with conscripted freighters and exploration vessels. These lightly armed craft were hard pressed to damage the armor of the heavier Slavern scrap cruisers. The war exposed the Eldred people's total lack of a professional fighting force and purpose built fleet to protect their territory. When an Old Empire fleet routed the Slavern invasion of the Eldred homeworld, it was painfully obvious how badly the defenders needed capital ship weapons. The Heavy Cruiser was built around a mass driver, enough shields to stay in a fight and enough support personnel to command a fleet of warships.
