Background

After thousands of years of suffering, the demon Belphegor decided that Hell was no longer the place for him. While he succeeded in his plan to escape the Infernal Realms, he had not planned for the angelic guards acting as warden around Hell. During his escape, Belphegor's wings were hewn from his body and, in losing them, lost his infernal powers. But he was free!

Arriving on Earth during the late 1800s, Belphegor used a minor glamour to disguise his demonic appearance and assumed the identity of eccentric scientist Peter Bishop and began inspiring other inventors to create new devices, which he then stole for himself. For over 100 years, Belpagor has influenced (and stolen credit from) hundreds of wicked inventors, spreading malice across the world. In order to make up for his lack of wings and infernal powers, Belpagor uses a rocket pack and a collection of explosives. Disappointed at the power sources available on Earth, Belpagor powers his devices with infernal energy drawn straight from Hell. With his powers "restored," Belpagor began using his techno-magic to operate as "Bat Outta' Hell!"

Brazier

Born of Magic Fire (He is magical in origin and cannot be Pushed).

- Body of Fire (Immune to all Fire, Heat, Radiation and Physical Projectile damage). You do not eat, drink or need to breathe.

- Fire Body : Anything that touches you, or strikes you in Melee takes d6 damage. Anything that enters within 5' of you, or ends a round within 5' of you, takes a d4 Fire damage and Ignites them. Your physical attacks add a d4 Fire damage to them.

- Mystic Armor (adds AC bonus & Toughness)

- Pyrokinesis: You can control small fires and smoke at will, snuff small flames and dissipate smoke at will (200'). You cannot create flame at will. You can shoot fire (Range: 120', d6 damage + Ignites), spray a flamethrower (Range: 40', d6 + Ignites to all 10'x10' in front of him), create a Firewall (Range: 40', standing up to 10'x10', doing d4 damage to anything that touches it or ends a round within 5' of the wall), sense flames or smoke within 600' and fuel flames (increase intensity up to four times). Basic flame does 1 HP damage a round. Each increasing intensity adds 1 HP of damage to the fire and takes an Action.

You can see and breathe in smoke without ill effect.

*Containment Chamber (+3 to AC): Removes Fire Body effects. You cannot remove it (yet).

Background

Evan Johanson hated school. He was tired of the teachers ignoring him. He was tired of being overlooked by the popular kids and the pretty girls. He would show them... He would show them all! Using an old book purchased from a curio shop, Evan conjured a demon and wished for the power to command fire. The demon granted Evan his wish, cackling as it vanished in a puff of brimstone.

The next day, with fire wreathing his hands and streaming from his eyes, Evan killed dozens of his classmates and school faculty before police arrived. While the police shot Evan multiple times, bullets did nothing to slow the teen. Rather, each wound belched forth only more fire, until his body was less human and more akin to a pillar of eldritch flame.

Evan was eventually captured by a team of superheroes and sent to prison, where he was fitted with a containment suit that dampened his powers. Rage still burned in Evan's heart; despite his atrocities, he still felt justified in what he had done. How dare others say he was the villain; he was the victim!

En route to trial, Evan escaped his captors. Although the containment suit damped his powers, his flames could not be extinguished completely. After several more deaths, Evan vanished into the city's underworld, ready to continue his blaze of vengeance against society as Brazier!

- Does d6 Edged Kinetic + d4 Magic damage if used as a sword.
- Returns to Gaunt upon command (within 1 mile).
- Does double damage to incorporeal and undead.

Background

The being known as Gaunt is so ancient that it has forgotten its original name. When he feels the need to feed, Gaunt seeks out any nearby super-powered being, which alone are able to sate his ever-hungry life force. Using chaos magic, Gaunt draws away their spiritual potential (represented with Action Points) to extend its undead existence.

Despite his fearsome appearance and spiritually-draining powers, Gaunt rarely kills his targets.

He prefers to "catch and release;" allowing his food to regenerate its spiritual potential to feed upon again and again. In order to keep a steady supply of food, Gaunt often allies with other villains, preferring supernatural beings over 'mundane' villains. Should his allies fail to capture his chosen "meal," Gaunt has no problem turning traitor, feeding on its allies as a last resort.

When not "on the hunt," Gaunt lives the life of the idle rich. Unlike other liches, who prefer to live in decay and squalor, Gaunt prefers fine clothing and fashionable jewelry. He rubs shoulders with immortal creatures and dimensional conquerors, as they are his only equals in his eyes.

Background

A car collision killed the wife and child of Thomas Knight. Thomas Knight watched his family die. The drunken teen responsible for the crash which killed his wife and child survived the crash, while Thomas himself watched his family consumed in flames.

Grief counselors tried to assist Thomas through the grieving process, though he quickly grew tired of so much talk of coping skills and survivor's guilt. Unable to work through his grief, Thomas instead sought out a means of vengeance. Turning to the occult, Thomas drifted from one charlatan to another until he found a true practitioner of magic willing to teach him. After mastering several advanced spells, Thomas abandoned his master and donned the mask of the vigilante. Thomas's first target was the young teen who had killed his family, consuming the young man in eldritch fire. Since that day, Knight turned his arcane talents towards hunting criminals, no matter how petty.

Background

Before his birth, Saqr's mother was kidnapped by an ancient cult hoping to open a portal to the City of Brass. They summoned an efreeti — a genie of fire and destruction — who laid with Saqr's mother as payment for his services. The ritual was thwarted by a group of superheroes, who liberated Saqr's mother, though the deed had already been done: she was already pregnant. Unfortunately for her, her devout parents cast her out of their house, leaving Saqr's mother to cobble together a piecemeal existence in the slums of her city.

Saqr ibn Zuhayr discovered the results of his strange parentage as a young teen. He could cause his hands to become engulfed in flames, unleashing vast destruction upon anything he touched. Determined to no longer live in a slum, Saqr quickly started using his powers for personal gain under the nickname "Sunder". In his masked identity, he cared little about where his wealth came from or how he acquired it, simply that whatever he wanted became his.

Background

Growing up in religiously strict foster home, John Tancred was taught that evil lurked everywhere and that only good men could fight it. John was always enthralled by stories about heroic knights fighting dragons, protecting humanity from the things that go bump in the night. As he grew, he became a top student and athlete, but turned down several athletic scholarships in favor of entering the seminary.

As a priest, John became known for giving sermons about fighting evil in all its forms. Unwilling to stay in one place, John traveled across the country on his motorcycle, preaching to whomever would listen.

However, while giving a sermon in Stark City, John's congregation was attacked by a gun-wielding thug aiming to rob the offering plate.

The vagrant fired several rounds into the air, causing the congregation to scatter, though John himself stood tall. Taking up the sword from a nearby statue of a saintly knight, John felt infused with the power of his faith and struck down the villain with superhuman strength and speed.

Awestruck by his newfound power, John Templar believes himself to be the avenging knight of God, as he attempts to protect humanity from the influences of evil. However, in his zeal, Templar seeks to remove the "inhuman" influences of the supernatural, believing that anything not coming from Earth — "things not a part of God's creation" — is a creation of the Devil.
