TALISMAN is the ingenious creation of Robert Harris and is beautifully illustrated by Gary Chalk. See it in your local games or hobby shop now.

If you enjoy fantasy role-playing games but only have time for a quick adventure, then TALISMAN is the game for you. It is a unique game which bridges the gap between board games and role-playing brought to you by Games Workshop.

As one of fourteen different characters, you must go on a dangerous quest to find the magic talisman. But monsters, traps and sinister places await your player-character. Only with skill and bravery will you survive.

When it comes to small figures, we are big on detail.

If you are looking for a metal figure of the fighter who is wearing a cloak, spiked platemail, horned helmet, face mask, backpack and is armed with a double-headed axe and shield bearing a death-head crest, then the chances are that CITADEL MINIATURES make one.

CITADEL MINIATURES have won more awards in the UK for their ranges of fantasy figures than all the other companies combined. Why? The answer is simple. We at CITADEL are gamers ourselves. We recognise the need for original, imaginative and individualised figures – so that's what we make. Visit any branch of GAMES WORKSHOP or local hobby shop to see the variety of our ranges and examine the detail we put into our figures. We are certain we'll have what your looking for.

If you prefer to look at our ranges at your leisure, then send a cheque or postal order for 95p (made payable to Games Workshop Ltd) plus a large stamped addressed envelope to Citadel Miniatures, 10 Victoria Street, Newark, Notts for the CITADEL COMPENDIUM. The compendium features illustrations of the entire CITADEL ranges, a figure painting guide, letters, Warhammer rules and scenarios and more.

With over 500 replies already received, the job of analysing the result of The Reader Strikes Back is going to be quite a task. The results should be available for inclusion in issue 48, but we are not making any promises.

I think it is about time we praised our excellent artists and it looks like the cover for issue 44 is going to win the 'Best Cover' category. Well done Alan Craddock. No matter what your opinion is about scantily-clad females, there is no denying the excellence of Alan's dramatic and vivid style. Future issues of White Dwarf will certainly be featuring more of his work.

The Demonist

Extra-Planar Specialist!

by Phil Masters

Following the series on Demons in RuneQuest, we thought it was time to give all you D&Ders a piece of the action.

Introduction

Demonists faithfully serve a divinity in exchange for spells and assistance. Although a clerical sub-class, they more closely resemble magic users in their introspection and solitary habits. Demonists call on demons and devils as servants and allies and can command many other beings from the Outer and Elemental Planes. Their studies give them skill in inter-dimensional travel, and their mastery of arcane lore bestows them with many informational spells. They can also counter such activity. As 'lay priests', demonists have some power over undead.

Basic Characteristics

Alignment: Must be some variant of evil or chaoticism – or both – as the profession is basically an anti-social one.

Minimum Statistics: Intelligence 14, Wisdom 13, Constitution 8, Charisma 11. 16 or greater Intelligence and wisdom gives a 10% experience bonus.

Races and Multi-Classes: Demonists can be human (no level limit), half-elves (maximum 10th level) or elves (maximum 7th level). Half-elves may be assassin/demonists; elves and half-elves may be fighter/demonists. Mixed-class characters may use any weapons, but assassin/demonists are limited to leather armour; fighter/demonists may use any armour.

Saving Throws: Save as clerics, +2 vs magic/jar or demonic/diabolic possession.

Melee: Attack as clerics; flaming oil and poison prohibited. Hit Dice are six-sided, +1 first level only. Armour must be leather or studded leather, any shield may be used. Weapons are limited to dagger, scimitar or sword (any type). Initial number of weapons: 2. Non-proficiency penalty: -4. Added proficiency per level: 1/4 levels.

Followers

Demonists may recruit hirelings on a one-job basis only. If they have a stronghold, however, as many as are needed to run it may be hired. No henchmen are allowed until 5th level, when one demonist, cleric or magic-user may be recruited as an assistant. A second may be employed at 7th level, and a third at 9th. Only at 11th level and up may henchmen of any class save paladins, rangers or druids be recruited. At 11th level or higher, a demonist may construct a stronghold (supernatural powers may be called in to help with the building).

Magic Items

Any magical dagger, scimitar or sword, magical shield, magical leather or studded leather armour may be used. Any item that protects against enchanted beings, that duplicates demonist spell-powers, or that is usable by all classes may be used. Other items allowed are: Rods of Beguiling and Smiting, Staves of Command (as a magic-user), Candles of Invocation, Magic Gauntlets and Girdles, Horns of the Tritons, Magic Incense, Prayer Beads, Magic Nets, Magic Pearls, Robes of Eyes, Spheres of Annihilation, Magic Talismans.

Scrolls of demonist-type spells may be used. From 4th level on, any scroll spell may be comprehended (with a read magic spell) and used. However, there is a failure chance in the latter of 68% (base), less 2% per experience level (ie: a 60% chance of failure at 4th level); a failure is 20% likely to be a reversal of the spell, otherwise it is just ineffective.

At 10th level +, spell scrolls may be scribed, including scrolls of protection against demons, devils, elementals, possession or undead. At 16th level +, demonists may enchant items as per clerics. They never brew potions.

Special Powers

1. With creatures from the Outer or Elemental Planes, a reaction bonus (as per high charisma) of 5-10% (d6+4) due to specialised knowledge of such creatures is gained.
2. Demonists may Turn Undead as a cleric of half the demonist's level, rounding fractions up – 1st and 2nd level demonists have the power of first level clerics, and so on.

Slowly, he raised his eyes to meet those of his King. 'Yes, my lord, I, Jhodever, Master Demonist, can indeed summon forth an Army of the Night or a Host of Devils to serve you. But my price is high'.

Demonist Magic

Demonist spells of first, second and third level are gained and memorised as low level cleric spells – by concentration and meditation. Such spells can be treated as clerical magic. Bonus spells are not gained for high wisdom.

When fourth or higher level spells can be used, the demonist must use a spell book and locate such enchantments as a magic-user; thus chances to comprehend, minimum and maximum numbers of spells and so on are exactly as for a magic-user of similar intelligence.

The Focus: One weapon must be carried as a focus and acts as a holy symbol in demonists' clerical-type magic. Its loss or destruction prevents use of most such spells until another is prepared. No demonist may possess more than one focus at any time, and its use is specific to him or her alone. Such a blade is prepared by being ritually cleansed in (un)holy water (as appropriate to his or her divinity) and having sanctuary (in this case needing no material component) and dedication cast on it. The demonist must subsequently use the focus for any ritual sacrifice needed or offered in the course of events (attempts to use other blades are futile and blasphemous).

The dedication on a focus is vulnerable to dispel magic, which renders the blade ritually useless until it can be re-prepared. If the blade is magical, the chance of a dispel being effective is reduced by 20% for each +1 on the blade in its least effective use (thus a Sword +2, +4 vs giants, is 40% less likely to be dispelled). Level-draining or life-stealing swords have a further 10% reduction, and (rare) Swords of Summoning may be better yet. Furthermore, any spell cast using a focus which is enchanted to +2 or better give a -1 on opponents' saving throws.

DEDICATION (Conjuration/Summoning)

Level: 1
Range: 3"
Duration: Special
Area of Effect: 1 creature or object
Components: V, S.
Casting Time: 3 segments
Saving Throw: None

An act or item is drawn to the attention of the demonist's deity; it does not enchant the subject, except a focus, and so cannot usually be dispelled. If a creature is dedicated as a sacrifice, providing this is in the deity's interest, the demonist's focus gains +3 to hit and +1 damage to strike the sacrifice.

SOUL SHIELD (Alteration)

Level: 1
Range: Touch
Duration: Special
Area of Effect: 1 creature
Components: V, S, M.
Casting Time: 2 segments
Saving Throw: None

The material component is the focus. The spell lasts for 2-5 rounds (d4+1) plus 1 round for each 3 full levels above 2nd attained by the caster (so a 5th level demonist gains 1 extra round's duration). It gives +2 on all saves vs enchantment/charm spells and similar device or creature powers, and against any psionic power that affects the victim's mind; it also gives +4 on saves vs magic jar.

SPIRIT COMMAND (Enchantment/Charm)

As clerical command spell, but it functions only on the Prime Material Plane against beings from the Outer or Elemental Planes. However, all saves against the spell are at -2.

DETECT SPIRIT (Divination) Reversible

Level: 2
Range: 8" + 1"/level
Duration: Special
Area of Effect: 1 creature or object
Components: V, S.
Casting Time: 5 segments
Saving Throw: None

Detects the presence of a soul, spirit or mentality in any body or object (enchanted swords, etc), and whether or not the mind controlling the body is its 'native'. Thus it will not detect charming or hypnosis, but will detect possession. Only the fact of a mind is detected, not its nature. The reverse, obscure spirit, has a range of touch and conceals a single mind or case of possession from magical or psionic detection for one round per level of the caster.

DUST WARRIORS (Conjuration/Summoning)

Level: 2
Range: 3"
Duration: Special
Area of Effect: 2" x 2" square
Components: V, S, M.
Casting Time: 3 segments
Saving Throw: None

Material components are the focus and a full set of teeth from a man-sized or larger carnivore which are cast on an area of earth, rock, raw stone, sand or gravel as the spell is cast. 3-6 skeletons will rise from the area, the centre of which must be in spell range. They will fight for the caster until they are turned or destroyed, the caster is slain, rendered unconscious or moves out of spell range of the group, or the magic is dispelled. However, in any round when none are fighting, the skeletons are 50% likely to uncontrollably fight each other to destruction; in this case, a single skeleton will strike blows at itself.

PETITION (Conjuration/Summoning)

Level: 2
Range: 0
Duration: Special
Area of Effect: Special
Components: V
Casting Time: 1 round
Saving Throw: None

A demonist may strike a bargain with a being of the Outer Planes, and gain a promise of possible supernatural assistance. The being, if not engaged elsewhere, may be contacted by petition when the aid is needed. It does not ensure that any promises are honoured.

PLANE SOURCE (Divination)

Level: 2
Range: 1"
Duration: Special
Area of Effect: 1 creature or item
Components: V, S, M.
Casting Time: 2 segments
Saving Throw: Special

Reveals the Plane of origin of any one creature, object or magical phenomenon in spell range, or the Plane reachable by the closest gate or dimensional nexus point. Hostile or unwilling creatures save vs spells to avoid their origins being divined. Material component: caster's focus.

WARD ELEMENT (Abjuration)

Level: 2
Range: 0
Duration: 6 rounds/level
Area of Effect: 5' radius sphere
Components: V, S, M.
Casting Time: 2 segments
Saving Throw: None

Creates a sphere of defence, comparable with protection from evil, which cannot be penetrated by any creature from one Elemental Plane specified when casting. Attack forms related to the element chosen are weakened by the sphere, so those inside get a saving throw as follows:

Fire: +2 on saves vs fire, and -1 from each damage die.
Water: +2 vs cold attacks; +3 vs acid attacks; -1 from acid damage per die.
Earth: +3 vs petrification; -2-5 damage from falling rocks, catapulted boulders, etc.
Air: +2 on saves vs lightning, +1 vs poison gas; -1-4 damage from either.
Magical component: caster's focus. This will not work on the Elemental Planes.

SPIRIT CALL (Conjuration/Summoning) Reversible

Level: 3
Range: 3"
Duration: 3 rounds + 1 round/level
Area of Effect: Special
Components: V, S, M.
Casting Time: 3 segments
Saving Throw: None

Summons 2d6+1 incorporeal entities from the Astral Plane, to anywhere within spell range on the Plane of casting. These spirits cannot stand full daylight; the sun drives them back to their own Plane, and equivalent light drives them back to the shadows. Their own sense is a limited form of ESP, so they need no illumination to 'see'. Each spirit serves the demonist until dispelled, released, or the reverse, dismiss spirit, is cast on them - or until spell duration expires. Each can lift up to 20gp in weight and move with it at a rate of 6". Their main ability is to temporarily activate corpses, one per spirit, as skeletons/zombies, but they can then be 'turned', returning them to their own Plane.

As 'extra-planar' beings, they are subject to protection spells, holy words, etc. Material component: caster's focus.

CALL IMPS (Conjuration/Summoning) Reversible

Level: 4
Range: 2"
Duration: 1/2 round/level
Area of Effect: Special
Components: V, S, M.
Casting Time: 4 segments
Saving Throw: None

Material components are the focus and a drop of human, elfen, half-elfen, dwarvish or halfling blood. The spell summons (d6+1) minor monsters to a desired point in spell range. Normally these are imps or quasits [MM] but DM's may▷ ▷ allow mephits [FF], dream demons [WD25], or the like. The beings will fight until they are destroyed, spell duration expires, the summoner is slain or rendered unconscious, or they are forced back to their Plane of origin. These are not familiars; they will only fight for the demonist, not perform more complex tasks.

The reverse, dismiss imp, returns one creature of any of the types summonable to its Plane of origin; a saving throw is allowed, but at -3. This needs holy water in place of the blood. Even familiars can be dismissed, and none may return for seven full days.

WARD MAGIC (Abjuration)

Level: 4
Range: 0
Duration: 1 turn/level
Area of Effect: 5" radius sphere
Components: V, S, M.
Casting Time: 4 segments
Saving Throw: None

A spherical protective zone is set up around the caster which lasts until dispelled, the caster leaves its confines, or its duration expires. No summoned, conjured or extra-dimensional creature can enter. Undead are slowed within it – skeletons and zombies may even have their animating magic dispelled since the sphere also acts as a dispel magic on any spell cast within or entering its confines. Even instantaneous spells not normally susceptible to dispelling, like lightning bolt, can be suppressed. Items with spells cast on them (including skeletons, zombies, animated objects, potions, etc) must be checked on their 1st and alternate subsequent rounds within the sphere (ie 1st, 3rd, 5th, etc) to see if they are dispelled.

The sphere may be dispelled, but its own power may act to dispel the dispel magic first! If two spheres intersect, each instantly cancels the other out. Material component: focus.

BEAST SUMMONS (Conjuring/Summoning)

Level: 5
Range: 6"
Duration: 5 rounds + 1 round/level
Area of Effect: Special
Components: V, S, M.
Casting Time: 5 segments
Saving Throw: None

Calls one creature from another Plane in 3 segments. The creature may be of almost any strength. Conditions available must be suitable for the monster; if the dice indicate a water weird where there is no water, or an xorn on a cloud island, a re-throw is made.

Die Roll	Monster
01-06	Aerial Servant
07-13	Demon, Type I
14-17	Demon, Type II
18-19	Demon, Type III
20-21	Devil, barbed
22-25	Djinni
26-28	Efreeti
29-39	Gargoyle
40-51	Hell hound
52-59	Invisible stalker
60-61	Night Hag
62-66	Nightmare
67-69	Rakshasa
70-73	Salamander
74-85	Spider, Phase
86-88	Grey Slaad
89-97	Water Weird
98-00	Xorn

CHARM SPIRIT (Enchantment/Charm)

Level: 5
Range: 6"
Duration: Special
Area of Effect: 1 creature
Components: V, S, M.
Casting Time: 5 segments
Saving Throw: Negates

As an MU's charm monster, except it only affects one creature not on its own Plane of origin. The creature will save at -3, but if it subsequently returns to its own Plane, an immediate check is made to see if the magic is broken. On this and all subsequent (weekly) checks on the creature's own Plane, the normal chance of the enchantment breaking is doubled. Material component: focus.

ENTRAPPING PENTAGRAM (Alteration, Enchantment/Charm)

Level: 5
Range: Special
Duration: Special
Area of Effect: Special
Components: V, S, M.
Casting Time: Special
Saving Throw: Special

This weird, dangerous and potent spell creates a special pentagram, some 7' across, within which a demon, devil, daemon, night hag or elemental can be trapped and made helpless, deprived of all magical powers and abilities, even including magic resistance and the ability to travel between Planes. Such beings will feel nothing but undying hatred for the one responsible, conceivably masked by fear after long domination and restraint.

The casting involves scribing the pentagram with a special ink of mammal blood, holy and unholy water, ground chalk, powdered iron and 3,000gp worth of rare ingredients. One hour of uninterrupted work and spell casting is needed. The surface used must be solid rock or stone, with no other marks or inscriptions on it.

The subject of the spell must be forced into the pentagram. Spells such as conjure elemental, cacodemon, great summoning or gate may be used to place the subject within the magic inscription, but it will then be aware of the attempt, and can use magic resistance and a saving throw vs spells to avoid entrapment. There is also a 25% chance that it will become aware of the identity of the demonist – often with serious consequences for the latter. More subtle are attempts to trick the subject into a pentagram concealed by dust, rugs, or vegetation, etc, or by use of charm spells. Even brute force might work...

Once the victim is within the pentagram, it activates and entraps the victim. This must be done within four hours per experience level of the caster, else the magic fades. However, once the victim is caught, the only escape is if another being of at least cat-size enters the diagram [note: no animal is likely to go anywhere near a trapped and angry being], if part of the diagram is erased from outside, or if the captured being is attacked by weapon or spell. Bargaining with trapped beings by offering freedom is plausible but usually unwise. Naturally, intelligent beings will often try to mislead, cajole or browbeat their captors.

CALL FOE (Conjuration/Summoning)

Level: 6
Range: 5" + 1"/level
Duration: Special
Area of Effect: Special
Components: V, S, M.
Casting Time: 1 round
Saving Throw: None

If a demonist knows or suspects that some extra-dimensional monster or group within spell range has a sworn, innate and ancient enemy or balancing force somewhere in the multiverse, this spell (material component: focus) will cause that enemy to appear within 1-4 rounds, in sufficient force to match their opponents, by invoking a fundamental balancing principle in the multiverse. Greater gods are potent enough to negate that principle and prevent their natural foes from appearing. Foes not wishing to be called may exert their magic resistance. The spell has no effect on the mundane beings of the Prime Material Plane.

Cases where enemies exist are djinni and efreeti, Bahamut and Tiamat, githyanki and githzerai [Fiend Folio].

CONTRACT (Alteration)

Level: 6
Range: Special
Duration: Permanent

Area of Effect: Two beings
Components: V, S, M.
Casting Time: 5 rounds
Saving Throw: None

This creates a binding contract between a mortal (who may be the caster) and a supernatural creature, of at least low intelligence, of the Outer or Elemental Planes. Casting requires the drafting of the full agreement, using rare inks and parchments worth 500gp; signed in the mortal's blood.

The contract is consistently binding, but only to its exact wording. Evil beings will naturally pervert the spirit while honouring the letter. Contracts made under coercion are not binding. If the supernatural being wishes, it may exert magic resistance to nullify the contract at the time of signing, but any informational spell will reveal this, entirely nullifying the agreement. The consequences of a later breach of contract by the being are up to the DM (such breaches are rare), but widespread knowledge of the perfidy, the close attention of furies and gods of justice, loss of power and worshippers, and other such restraints can be applied. Deviations from the contract by the mortal cause the loss of one point of strength and constitution every 12 hours until the divergence is rectified, or the immediate notification and appearance of the supernatural being – which has to be agreed when the contract is signed. Outright breach of contract instantly paralyses the mortal for 4-16 turns and immediately brings the supernatural creature to the scene. The spell can only be broken by three full wishes, cast simultaneously.

GREAT SUMMONING (Conjuration/Summoning)

Level: 6
Range: 2"
Duration: Special
Area of Effect: Creature Summoned
Components: V, S, M.
Casting Time: Special
Saving Throw: Special

Essentially a superior cacodemon spell, this will summons any named demon of less than princely status, any named devil of less than arch-devil rank, certain potent entities from other dimensions possessing true names, and even a few demi-gods with that characteristic. The material components in each case vary widely, but always include the focus and 500+gp worth of rare and peculiar substances.

The procedure is as for a cacodemon; casting time is 2d4+4 hours, and the saving throw is rolled on 2d10. The attitude of the being summoned varies with alignment, but is never less than extreme irritation. Creatures summoned will always have full hit die. A spirit trap spell attack may be employed by some demonists against the being summoned.

DISMISSAL (Abjuration)

Level: 7
Range: 12"
Duration: Special
Area of Effect: 5" radius sphere

Components: V
Casting Time: 3 segments
Saving Throw: Special

Any creature summoned by the demonist must depart instantly, with no saving throw allowed. Similarly, any creature brought to the area against its will and by magic summons may freely choose to allow the dismissal to return it to its place of origin, regardless of its summoner's desires. Any extra-dimensional creature arriving by its own powers or abilities must save vs spells at -3 or depart, and in any event will be stunned for 1-4 rounds. Finally, any creature willingly conjured or summoned to the scene by another's magic is automatically paralysed for 2-8 rounds, and for each such, their summoner must save vs spells at -4 or see the creature depart. The spell effects every such creature within a 5" radius sphere with its centre within spell range selected by the caster. No creature dismissed may depart its home Plane again for one full year, unless summoned or conjured by the caster of the dismissal.

RAISE PANDEMONIUM (Conjuration/Summoning)

Level: 7
Range: 10"
Duration: 1 turn + 1 round/level
Area of Effect: 4" radius circle
Components: V, S, M.
Casting Time: 7 segments
Saving Throw: None

This hideously dangerous and chaotic spell summons an uncontrollable crowd of demons, all of which appear in an 8" diameter circle with its centre at a point selected within spell range. The caster has no influence over the monsters, which remain until the summoning magic is dispelled from each of them, each is slain, or spell duration expires. Material component: focus.

The group will comprise: 2-12 type I demons; 2-7 type II; 30% chance of 2-8 quasits; 20% chance of 1-8 manes; 80% chance of 1-4 of type III; and a 65% chance of a single type IV.

If no non-demonic beings are detectable in an area, there is a 90% chance of an intermittent fight between those of type I and those of type II. There is a 10% chance of this if the only other available victims appear weak and non-aggressive. Otherwise, they will be mostly interested in slaughtering mortals, though the stronger and more intelligent specimens may seek to dominate the others or hunt down the richest pickings.

SPIRIT TRAP (Conjuration/Summoning)

Level: 7
Range: 2"
Duration: Permanent until broken
Area of Effect: 1 creature
Components: V, S, M.
Casting Time: Special + 1 segment

Saving Throw: Negates
 As MU's trap the soul spell, except the range is 2", it can only be cast on the Astral, Ethereal or Material Planes, and the creature to be trapped must originate on the Outer or Elemental Planes. The prison object, which requires no further spells to prepare, is a specially made, hand-sized, engraved and carved brass bottle, costing at least 800gp. It must be corked as the spell takes effect, and sealed with wax within an hour (else the prisoner will escape). Removing the bung frees the prisoner.

SUMMONS ARMY (Conjuration/Summoning)

Level: 7
Range: Special
Duration: Special
Area of Effect: Special
Components: V, S, M.
Casting Time: Special
Saving Throw: None

A demonist wishing to summon a supernatural army must perform a long series of tasks to locate, recruit and transport the force. Only one such conjuration is possible in any lunar month, and in 5% of cases, none is. Thus, with a 5% chance that some unknown demonist has performed the magic, there is a 10% chance that the spell will prove temporarily impossible, even if no known character has already used it that month. The demonist must cast an augury to check this point, a divination to ascertain where the magic must be performed, and a contact other plane to reveal the army available (roll dice on table below) and to open negotiations with them. Note that the Plane to be contacted will always be two removed from the Prime Material.

The place of summoning will always be a wild, desolate, deserted spot, 1-100 miles from the demonist in a random direction. The demonist must journey there and begin casting before the lunar month is out, else the chance is lost, and preparations must begin anew. Once there, four large bonfires defining a quadrilateral big enough to contain the army to be summoned must be built to burn rare woods, incense and spices to a total value of 5,000gp. The fires must be kept burning throughout the summoning, which will be 1-4 turns plus the materialisation period of the army (see table).

A demonist who summons an army and fails to pay them immediately can expect serious trouble. Certainly, no other army will ever subsequently answer his call unless paid well and in advance after the original army has been paid at least treble its usual rate to compensate for delay and disrespect.

A summons army can only be dispelled if the entire force is brought back to the summoning point. However, individual members can be forced back to their own Planes by holy water or dismissal spells.

Die Roll Army Type

(d100)	(Turns to Materialise)
01-16	Army of the Dead (3)
17-27	Army of the Night (4)
28-33	Demon Hordes (2)
34-39	Devil Host (2)
40-45	Swamp Legion (3)
46-51	Insect Swarms (3)
52-65	Slaadi Death Squad (4)
66-72	Githyanki War-Party (5)
73-84	Tree Spirits (2)
85-00	Warriors of Valhalla (5)

Army of the Dead: A demon lord's emissaries comprising 50-300 skeletons and 5-20 zombies led by a ghost. They will serve, providing it is to wreak havoc and destruction, for one lunar month.

Army of the Night: A night hag, mounted on a nightmare, in command of her retinue of 5-20 huge vampire bats (as stirges, but have -3 to hit in full daylight) as scouts, 4-24 ghouls and 3-18 shadows as warriors. She will seek evil souls to steal, serving for up to one lunar month for such offers.

Demon Hordes: A type V or VI demon (50% chance of either) leading 2-8 quasits, 2-16 type I, 3-9 type II and 1-8 type III demons. Seeking chaos and destruction, they will serve for up to one lunar month or until each member has consumed one human or demi-human corpse – whichever is less.

Devil Host: A horned devil or pit fiend (50% chance of either) commanding 1-8 fire mephits, 2-16 barbed devils, 2-9 bone devils, and 1-8 erinyes. They will serve for one lunar month or until each has a victim to carry off to Hell.

Swamp Legion: Foul creatures from the dismal marshes of the Lower Planes, led by a type II demon, including 5-40 giant frogs, 3-18 killer frogs, 3-30 poisonous frogs, 3-18 giant toads, 2-12 poisonous toads, 2-8 ochre jellies, 3-18 lizard men and 4-24 frog folk [Best of WD Scenarios II]. The Legion is chaotic evil in nature, and will serve for up to two weeks in exchange for blood and flesh – preferably human or elven.

Insect Swarms: Underlings of an insect-god comprising 5-30 giant wasps, 3-18 giant fire beetles, 4-32 giant boring beetles, and 30-120 giant warrior ants. They will serve for up to one week in return for 2,000gp worth of grains and fresh meat, and any crops they should pass over. The demonist may also petition for one insect plague in that time.

Slaadi Death Squad: [FF] A grey slaad leading 3-18 red, 2-12 blue, and 1-6 green slaad. They will serve for one lunar month in exchange for one live human slave to take back to limbo for each squad member.

Githyanki War-Party: [FF] An 8th level knight mounted on an old red dragon (which they summon during their materialisation time) commanding 13rd level githyanki (any class), and 2 6th level fighters. They will serve for one lunar month or until the knight is slain in return for 5,000gp in gems and silver. There is a 50% chance they will attack any mind-flayers or githzerai on sight, contrary to the summoner's wishes.

Tree Spirits: Immaterial beings of the Astral Plane who will activate 30-120 trees to act as full-power treants and serving for one lunar month in exchange for solemn vows never to wilfully harm forests or woodland, plus the return of at least ten square miles of cultivated land to a state of forestation. Oath-breakers can expect vengeance from a force at least three times as big as that which served them.

Warriors of Valhalla: 20-120 fighters equivalent in every way to a group of berserkers [MM], save that each has a magic resistance of 10% (leader types have 20%), and total immunity to charm and sleep magic. They serve for battle glory, plus plunder to the value of 100gp per head, remaining for up to three months or until at least half their numbers are slain and the slaying has been avenged by the total defeat of the enemy involved – whichever is less. □

PRIVATEERS AND GENTLEMEN Fantasy Games Unlimited £10.95

You've read Hornblower. You've seen Mutiny on the Bounty. Now play Privateers and Gentlemen, the historical RPG set in the period 1755-1815, the age of fighting sail.

In P&G, the player is a naval officer who must survive the horrors of battle, mutiny, capture and the drunken ship's surgeon whilst trying to improve his wealth and social standing. The set contains; a blank character sheet, a useful referee's screen and three rulebooks that cover all aspects of the period. Promotions and Prizes is the first book and deals with character generation and combat. Character generation can be long and tedious and so the game is better served by agreeing on the past history of a character rather than relying on several die-rolls. Also, it is not worth playing a character who's rank is lower than Midshipman. In fact, the best games are had by captaining a ship as this allows the player to give direct orders for manoeuvre and battle as outlined in Heart of Oak.

It is this second book that makes P&G so unique and so enjoyable. Inside are rules for designing and fighting different types of ship. This makes P&G two games in one; the player takes on both the role of an officer and the role of a ship.

The final volume, Tradition of Victory, gives extensive and detailed background information, including a most useful time-line of historic events.

Jon Williams, the designer writes with humour and authority. He makes rule reading absorbing and informative. A nice feature of P&G is the inclusion of a quick method for generating full and interesting NPCs. I also like the need for social graces such as dancing, singing and carriage driving. These can be just as important as showing distinction in battle (remember Hornblower's first promotion came because he was 'a good fourth for whist').

On the detrimental side, there are no dice or scenarios in the game. The latter is lamentable, but designing your own is no great problem with the books of C S Forrester and Joseph Conrad alone containing hundreds of ideas. As a starter, try sending a prize crew to take command of a captured ship. The players will have to navigate their precious cargo to a specific destination whilst copied with hostile captives, a battered ship and the threat of recapture by the enemy.

This game is highly recommended and can be played as pure wargaming, pure role-playing or a mixture of the two. P&G is exciting, flexible and full of atmosphere. Only the fact that refereeing a game is so difficult and exhausting prevents me from awarding full marks.

The Asylum and Other Tales Chaosium Inc £7.95

Asylum and other tales is the second set of scenarios produced by Chaosium for Call of Cthulhu. Rather than being a series of connected adventures like Shadows of Yog Sothoth, Asylum offers seven scenarios of short to medium length designed to fill the gap between longer campaigns, and at the same time can be slipped into the middle of a campaign to spice up a low point or simply to put the investigators off the scent and baffle them. The first scenario The Auction is set in Vienna, Austria, opening new vistas for the Keeper and the players; how many of the investigators can converse in German? That's just their first problem. The auction itself offers many occult objects some useful, some worthless. Who are the discreet clients of the House of Augsburg? The investigators are provided with a cut-out brochure detailing the lots, and the Keeper with a very useful NPC bidding table. The Keeper has the option to extend this scenario with ramifications relating to the new owners of certain artifacts.

The Madman, the second scenario concerns the healing of an insane mutual friend of the investigators; this is the shortest of all the adventures, with a single but crucial twist in the story, ideal for a short session.

The third adventure Black Devil Mountain has much akin with folklore... beasts wandering about during the night. An unfinished letter leads to a real blood-bath needing the investigators to be really well equipped for the final showdown with a terrifying array of natural and unnatural creatures; highly recommended for a bloodthirsty group!

The Asylum is the fourth scenario, and it, quite rightly, has pride of place in the title. A really horrific story based again on the 'insane investigator' premise. A spate of deaths among the inmates and a letter dated June 5th, 1814 are but two of the features; excellent detail throughout which will stretch the skills of the players. The story lends itself for a whole weekend. By means of a complete contrast the fifth scenario is set onboard ship, in the cramped confines of First Class the investigators are trapped by deceit, avarice and murder; who can they trust! There is nowhere to run, a great adventure for the paranoid...

Adventure six is on dry land investigating strange goings on around Arkham, entitled Gate from the Past. This is probably the most potentially terminal for the players and the Keeper must exercise extreme caution when running it.

The final scenario Westchester House, provides the Keeper with an opportunity to teach the investigators how to sift clues and judge information for what it is; red herrings abound in a tale of a haunted house with a crucial twist.

In conclusion Asylum is a neat collection providing short interesting adventures. I have always thought that scenarios go on too long and the vitality of the story and the players tail off. Black Devil Mountain and Asylum are the strongest of the group. Quality-wise it compares very favourably with Shadows. Don't get put off the price!

SFB SUPPLEMENT 1 - Fighters and Shuttles Task Force Games £5.95

The introduction of this expansion to Star Fleet Battles heralds two new developments in the Star Fleet Universe. The first is the forthcoming Commanders Rulebook, which will bring the previously published rules (boxed set and 3 expansions) to an ordered whole. This is to be in a loose-leaf format allowing expandability by inserting new rules in the appropriate sections. Supplement 1's rules are thus A4 size and ready punched without any overlap of two rules section on a single page. The second development is the idea of supplements which will deal with specific subjects, in this case, fighters, shuttles and carrier warfare, as opposed to expansions which add a bit to many sections of the rules. The theory is that if you don't like or use fighters then you won't have to buy this supplement as it is not necessary for the use of any subsequent supplements and/or expansions.

As to the supplement itself, unlike the 3 expansion sets there is no errata (this is supposed to be dealt with in the new rulebook), and only two main rules sections. The first of these is for dealing with Drones as direct-fire weapons. These rules are not intended to simplify Drone combat, if anything they complicate it and necessitate different tactics. However, they are 'cleaner' in that, if in 1 moves range, a Drone will be fired and its effect resolved immediately. The advantages are that fewer counters are on the map at one time, less moving of counters need be done and less notes (of targets etc) need be kept. This rule appears to work quickly after a bit of practice. The technique can also be applied to plasma torpedoes if desired. Note that this rule is optional only and you may ignore it. In fact, I'd recommend using it only where large amounts of Drone firing is expected.

The second main rule and in my view, better one, covers dogfighting between fighters in the same hex. This ties down enemy fighters and allows effective CAP (Combat Air Patrol) by defending fighters. It is accomplished by making one fighter advantaged (ie on his opponents tail), decided on by speed, dogfight rating (given for all shuttles, from 0-4), a die roll and other factors. Combat is in 4 Dogfight Resolution Interfaces each turn, and allows phasers to be fired 4 times per turn, in Dogfighting only, at low power.

Fourteen new ships, nine new fighters and a Multi-Role (super-admin type) shuttle for each race are introduced, with 10 new SSD's in the Commanders format with all necessary information (turn mode, weapon charts etc) on them. The ships include Auxiliary Carriers on freighter hulls, Fed Police Carriers and Heavy Carriers (20+ fighters) for Klingons, Kzintis, Hydrans, Tholians and the Romulans. Experimental Gorn and Lyran carriers are also featured. The 216 counters provide 139 fighters and 53 Drones (for Federation and any race colours).

Five scenarios are presented, four of standard/typical fighter actions, the other being the Pleiades Turkey Shoot, featuring 120 Klingon fighters, gunboats and frigates attacking the last Federation Carrier group. The last sheet in the rules is a Master Fighting Chart and an extract of the Master Ship Chart showing all the new ships and many other carriers and escorts. One criticism is that there are no plastic zip-lock bags to keep the counters in, other than that an excellent addition to SFB.

THE BIG RUBBLE: The Deadly City Chaosium Inc £14.95

Hard on the heels of Pavis comes its necessary complement, describing the vast, supposedly treasure-filled ancient ruin against whose walls modern Pavis is built. Again I must disclaim any bias in this review, although my name is on the box, as provider of the scenario Wolfhead's Lair. I had hoped to read words of wisdom on my scenario from some other reviewer, but The Man says I gotta review the Big Rubble and you don't argue with The Man. So I will say that, for reasons not unconnected with The Great Chart Caper [see Pavis], Wolfhead, Griselda and a few more are hiding out in the Rubble. You may come across them and try to rub them out, grab them for ransom, bring them to justice, or whatever; it will be tough, but not impossible – after all, these are only proficient crooks and adventurers, not Rune level chaotics.

The pack contains three booklets, common knowledge for the players, the GM's Guide, and the episodes (scenarios), also a large-scale map of the Rubble with modern Pavis. The players' booklet gives basic information on the Rubble, spots notable for rumours of treasure or other features, general beliefs about all this, and ways to get in; otherwise it contains some Lunar licensing forms (failure to produce one if encountered by a Lunar patrol will result in bad trouble) and an account of the Yelorna cult. This is similar to Yelmalo, Yelorna being a fighting daughter of Yelm who has close associations with starlight, and is for (mainly) female warriors.

The GM's booklet gives much more; of particular interest is the account of the Aldryami Garden, which includes descriptions of various valuable plants and some unusual and alarming gangs (many of them Chaotic) that can be found in the most dangerous areas, which are presented with considerable imagination.

Two large areas, one in each half (it is bisected by the Zola Fel river), Huntland and The Big Grazing, are open country, but only more hazardous to cross for that. The Troll Stronglands occupy much of the northern part, the Aldryami Garden much of the southern, overlapping the ancient walls. Manside is the other major area, closest to modern Pavis and safest for humans, but occasional patrols here and in the open areas by the Lunar forces do not provide much security. A network of magically preserved roads crisscross the Rubble, the swiftest means of travel through it, and three bridges link the northern and southern halves, but getting across these will at least involve the payment of a toll. Hills, crowned by ruins or still occupied forts, rise in various parts. A wide variety of encounters, not all actively dangerous, can be made in all areas, the chance is only 10%, but must be rolled every 5 minutes. In contrast with Griffin Mountain and Borderlands, no pre-set encounters except for a Lunar patrol and the gangs mentioned (which are rather special, and should not be brought on every time) are offered, except for specific scenarios. Similarly, no detail except the barest statement is given on many areas of interest (such as the Pavis Old Mint or Ogres' Island) and only very rarely are stats provided for really important personages. Unless Chaosium plans to issue supplements, much of the Rubble is therefore open to development by individual GM's.

The scenarios: Temple at Feroda takes a party out of Pavis to the river mouth, to recover a valuable artifact for the Zola Fel cult from the silted-up ancient site of Feroda; it is fairly straightforward, and the GM might want to spice it up a bit. Krang's Table involves penetrating into Troll territory to capture an Eiritha table from a minor clan, this being a magical artifact of particular value to a local butcher, who offers 7000L for it. There is at least one loose end (how can the trolls activate it if an Eiritha woman's POW is needed?), but more serious is that, although there is good scope for role-playing and using one's wits in tracing the butcher's information and identifying the clan, the venture seems to offer precious little chance of success for any but the kind of party that would hardly concern itself with such petty doings, unless I have badly misunderstood it.

Balastor's Barracks, an updating of an earlier Chaosium's product offers the greatest prize of all, the fable Axe of Balastor, last human ruler of ancient Pavis, for which many different cults and persons would pay extremely highly; but the Barracks themselves are reputedly the most dangerous underground area in the Rubble, and there are other dangers in the neighbourhood. The Devil's Playground is an odd area in The Big Grazing, which seems safe if unpleasant during the day but is rumoured a source of chaotic influences; the players will have been pressured by Fleeter Nemm, an important priest, to investigate rumours of underground tunnels. This offers good opportunities for information-gathering and role-playing, as well as a hair-raising descent below ground, but is survivable, though tough. It offers almost endless scope for an inventive GM in developing the system of tunnels and what might lurk in them. Finally, the Puzzle Canal details a remarkable structure created by a demigod priest of the Empire of the Wyrms' Friends long ago, easily accessible from the river and traversable by water or land in most parts; it is inherently magical and known or reputed to be the site of various marvels, including burning water and a picture that foretells the future. The denizens include many that one would expect in a watery context, also fugitives, which I do not imagine many RQ players will have encountered before.

In my view, these last two are the most interesting because they are the least straightforward, suggesting some of the eeriness and magical quality of remains in a very ancient ruined city; Balastor's Barracks is a high-class dungeon, in the variety of encounters and discoveries offered, and the rest are fairly straightforward, needing planning as well as fighting but not involving anything really special or peculiar, though some of the possible encounters in the Rubble will come as unwelcome surprise.

Overall: 10 at best, much 8-9, some scenarios 5-6. Oliver Dickinson

Critical Mass is a regular book review column, edited by Dave Langford. This issue, Dave attempts to enrage Asimov fans.

After the Battle

None of this month's books have much to do with battles or their aftermath: my brain just feels that way, having reached the culmination of long toil with the delivery of a novel called The Leaky Establishment to Frederick Muller Ltd – you read it here first, and maybe next Spring I'll be allowed to review this merry tale of domestic nuclear weaponry. ['Triffic' – Mrs Langford.]

Asimov on Science Fiction [Granada 334pp £7.95] is nonfiction for Dr A, who should have much wisdom to impart. Unfortunately, though he remarks 'I don't like to explain anything briefly,' the 55 essays here (eked out with usual apparatus of forewords and afterwords) are mostly brief bits of journalism or monthly editorials from Isaac Asimov's SF Magazine (IASFM), too short to say much about their subjects.

Good things here include clarity, lucidity, sensible if unsurprising advice to young SF authors, and condemnation of the horrid term 'sci-fi'. Not so good: Asimov's pose as lovable egomaniac grows tedious, with his own stories forever referred to as examples of excellence in this or that area of SF, with ceaseless flauntings of his fame, achievements, awards, with crass hints that the SF Writers of America should give him their Grand Master trophy. Also Asimov is no critic: he maligns 1984 on the incredible ground that George Orwell didn't do a good job of predicting the future. Is there any other SF expert who's failed to twig that 1984 isn't prediction but a cautionary tale and political parable for the year in which it was written, 1948?

If you enjoy Asimov's good-humoured essay style, and don't mind bitterness and repetition, this is an interesting collection to dip into.

Also from IASFM we have Martin Gardner's SF Puzzle Tales [Penguin 148pp £2.95]: the 'tales' are only brief, joky camouflage for the puzzles, which as always with Gardner are brain-stretching and apt to teach a little painless Higher Mathematics. Many are familiar from Gardner's former books, but he's added new twists to fool smart alics, and often a puzzle's solution features a variant puzzle, and so on: there are three sets of answers! Minor irritant: these being written for IASFM, Gardner misapplies great ingenuity to work in Asimov's name wherever possible. 'By Asimov!' people swear. On page 123, tiring of the obligation to do this, Gardner contrives to associate Asimov's name with the word 'fat'. Fancy that.

One thing Asimov-as-critic doesn't like is the British 'New Wave' SF associated with New Worlds magazine in and after the 60s: all sex and violence, he complains. Brian Aldiss thought differently, writing in 1969: 'In twenty years time... collectors will be fighting for tatty old issues, to read every precious word he wrote. Other firms will reprint it and make a bomb.' Here in 1983 we have New Worlds: an Anthology edited by Michael Moorcock [Fleming 512pp £3.50], with a smart abstract cover and the term 'sf' hidden decorously on the back. And indeed the 30 stories, poems and articles are a consciously 'literary' and Moorcockian selection, including some very good things indeed but little that I (and less that Asimov) would call SF. Ballard is represented by one of his most impenetrable pieces, Sladek by his least Sladekian story, Barrington Bayley by a tale whose larding of Burroughs pastiche (William, not Edgar Rice) buries his usual exhilarating metaphysics. It's an immensely valuable book for fans, no less than 131 pages being devoted to a complete index of all 216 issues of NW. But the magazine's range was better displayed in the eight out-of-print Panther Best SF From NW anthologies.

Three quibbles: it would have been graceful to reveal that the 'James Colvin' appearing frequently in the index was a magazine house name most often used by Moorcock himself, to add a footnote to Bayley's 'The Four-Colour Problem' mentioning that the mathematical enigma featured in this story was cracked in 1976, and to name among the 'successors' to NW the only magazine doing comparable work today – Britain's very own Interzone. [£5 for four issues to 124 Osborne Rd, Brighton, BN1 6LU].

Several books left and not much space. Piers Anthony's Juxtaposition [Granada 415pp £1.95] completes the trilogy begun with Split Infinity and Blue Adept, an uneasy mix of fantasy, SF and Anthony's favourite hobby-horse of game-playing. Most annoying is the sheer thickness of his characters, who spend ages having the plot explained to them or alternatively explaining it to others. A favourite moment is in Blue Adept, whose hero enters the forbidden cave to fight the dragon who has slain all previous applicants, etc. The moment of truth comes: hero smites brow in sudden realization and says, approximately, 'Dear me, I forgot to bring my sword.' Juxtaposition is more, much more, very much more of the same stuff from the previous two, and sometimes I thought it would never end, as in a final stroke of miscalculation Anthony allows his twin worlds of magic and technology to merge in a prolonged tussle – goblins, golems, tanks, power winches, unicorns, plastic explosive, magicians, cannon – which bores on into wearisome farce.

A pleasant little novel is Tea with the Black Dragon by R A MacAvoy [Bantam/Corgi 166pp £1.50]: it's only just fantasy, one of the characters being a retired Imperial Chinese dragon manifesting as an abnormally strong old man, but the eccentric blend of mythology, Zen, prophecy, gentleness and computer crime is engaging. A rare thing, the computer jargon is correct – probably we can blame the printers for 'CPM' where it should be 'CP/M'.

Everyone has read T H White's The Once and Future King (if not, why not?). A collection of his fine short stories, including several fantasies, is out in paperback, The Maharajah [Futura 210pp £2.50]. It includes the noted 'The Troll', whose understated frivolity achieves a curiously scary effect, nearly as soulchillingly dreadful as a White Dwarf rejection slip.

Paladin, another disguise for the sinister Granadoids who appear to be taking over this column, are doing a series of 'paranormal' books under the auspices of the Society for Psychical Research. Beyond the Body by Dr Susan Blackmore [271pp £2.50 – gosh, I was on TV with her once, Granada of course] is a sensible and hard-headed look at out-of-the-body experiences. Blackmore decides that almost certainly OBEs are subjective, abnormal psychological states – raising fascinating questions about similarities between experiences, even those of obscure tribes. Could they be a consequence of the 'wiring' of the brains? Also included is much analysis of case histories and the theories of (eg) Theosophists. Perhaps the availability of so much information might inspire D&D players to have another try with the astral/etheral rules, which never seem too popular – maybe because it's irritating when Tharg the fifth-level Theosophist drifts astrally off to have fun while everyone else has to guard his vacated body from being skewered by gnolls.

Arthur C Clarke's Tales of Ten Worlds [Pan 205pp £1.75] and Profiles of the Future [Pan 255pp £1.95] have been reissued for the umpteenth time. The first is a story collection including some classics, the second is a somewhat inadequate update of this stimulating work of futurology first published in 1962. You ought to have them both.

If I've timed this right the next big SF convention will be Novacon 13 at the Royal Angus Hotel, Birmingham, 4-6 November. £7 membership to 46 Colwyn Road, Beeston, Leeds 11. WD readers are invited to challenge me at the bar with the words, 'You are Dave Langford and I claim my right to be allowed to buy you a pint.'

Today I had a fanletter: 'If Ian Livingstone can afford to go to Bali for his hols he deserves to be destroyed in print by yourself.' What can this mean? It is signed 'Peter Kershaw'... [Thanks. The enforcers will take it from there. –Ed]□

ZINE SCENE

Zine Scene is to be an occasional column all about fanzines, written by Mike Lewis. It will feature news, reviews and gossip in the world of RPG fandom.

Hello, good evening and welcome to ZineScene. As you can see, White Dwarf has lured yet another fanzine editor to its pages. Needless to say, I'm purely here for the sake of art! I've been informed by our curly-haired editor that ZineScene should be an occasional news and reviews column which also features chat and provocative comments on the street-level of RPG fandom. Well, I'll try to live up to the image, though I'm sure that if I drank as much as Dave Langford, I'd be as witty and down to street-level (or should that be gutter?).

I hope that those of you who don't buy or read fanzines (no-one buys them without reading them, do they?) will find something of interest in this column and that you'll be tempted to try one or two of the things yourself. Mind you, that's how we all start — with just one or two fanzines. Once upon a time, I was a mild mannered D&D player, now look at me: I await each post with eager anticipation, and even the sight of a brown envelope is enough to start the fingers twitching. The damn things soon grow on you, and before you know where you are, you've become a fanzine junkie! But enough of the witterings of a crazed member of Fanzines Anonymous and on with the real meat of this column.

If you are new to the whacky world of fandom, then the place to start is with the fanzine addict's bible: Twenty Years On. This is a quarterly listing of postal games, FRP and SF fanzines which gives addresses, prices and details of content and style. The man responsible for this mine of information is Simon 'Biggles' Billenness, who (when he's not gallivanting around Switzerland) can be contacted at 20 Winifred Rd, Coulsden, Surrey, CR3 3JA. 20YO is 35p for one or £1 for a three issue sub.

Those of you who actually read the White Dwarf News page, rather than just gawking at the pretty pictures of yet more Citadel miniatures, may well remember a mention of the Fanzine Association in WD44. This was the brainwave of John McKeown and is still very much 'under discussion' due to a lot of fanzine editors' fears of an official organisation. The planned newsletter is being produced by Steve Norledge however, and is available for an SSAE.

Despite these delays, John has gone ahead with another excellent idea, this being the Zine Service. This enables shops and clubs to order several different fanzines from one central source, thus reducing the hassle of dealing with several editors. Reaction to the initial mailing of fliers has been quite good and hopefully, once shops realise how beneficial the scheme is, they'll be queueing up to join it. John can be contacted at 22 Hall Lane, Upminster, Essex, RM14 4AF.

John doesn't just come up with ideas like the Zine Service, he also edits a fanzine of his own. This is Miser's Hoard and is one of the best new fanzines around. It features discussion, articles, reviews and scenarios for various systems and has a high quality of content and appearance. Certainly well worth checking out for 50p from John at the above address.

The damn things soon grow on you, and before you know where you are, you've become a fanzine junkie!

The summer always seems to produce a large crop of new fanzines, probably because would-be editors are free from the education system for long enough to make their zines a reality. This summer was no exception and zines popped up from all over the country.

Steve Norledge, newly departed from Tempestuous Orifice (now there's a name to conjure with!) has returned with Rapscallion, a zine biased towards postal gaming. Steve intends to feature lots of chat, FRP and games. The first issue certainly backed this up, with Call of Cthulhu, zine reviews, an article on photography and plenty of games (including postal Judge Dredd). Apart from the oddity of being typed double-spaced throughout, 'tis an excellent start. 50p from Steve Norledge, 75 Hawkhurst Way, W. Wickham, Kent, BR4 9PE.

Another new zine to burst upon the scene, is Corrosive Comix. This is rather unique in being a mixture of comic strips and FRP material. The first issue has three SF/F related strips and part one of a continuing T&T scenario. While the art isn't going to give Brian Bolland any great worries, some of it is very striking. 50p from Marc Laming, Corrosive Comix Unltd, c/o 75 briar Lane, Hatfield, Herts.

Speaking of comics fandom (of course we were), those of you interested in comics as well as FRP games, should check out Fantasy Advertiser. This is a leading comics fanzine which not only has lots of news, reviews and chat plus adverts (...Advertiser — get it?), it now has a role-playing column. FA is 40p for 40 pages from Martin Lock, 3 Marlow Court, Britannia Square, Worcester, WR1 3DP. The latest issue is a team up with Worlds Collide, another comics fanzine, so here's your chance to try two fanzines for the price of one!

And talking of team-ups (don't you just love the way this column flows together?), the idea has entered FRP fandom. December will see the release of a one-off team-up issue of Dragonlords 20/Quasits and Quasars 10. DL and Q&Q are both well known FRP zines and this is the chance to give the two fanzines a bit of extra exposure to the other's readers; as well as giving the readers a bumper Christmas issue.

One zine that should be better known than it is at the moment is Wyrms' Claw. WC seems to be overlooked by most fans which is a shame; it features articles, reviews and other fanzine type things for 60p from Wyrms' Claw, 119 Derbyshire Rd South, Moor Nook, Sale, Cheshire M33 3GS.

Well, the word limit, that dreaded bane every writer fears seems to have caught up with me, so I'll say goodbye for two months. □

Extracts from the Travels of Tralk True-Eye
goblins in RuneQuest, for GMs to use

I had desired to visit the Commonwealth of the Goblins so long that I scarcely remember how the wish was originally excited; and was in the Spring of last year induced to undertake the journey by finding in Wechsel Wide-walk a companion whose acuteness would aid my inquiry and whose gaiety of conversation and civility of manners were sufficient to counteract the inconveniences of travel and the barbaric culture of those savages commonly known as Goblins.

Thus commences Tralk True-Eye's famous study A Journey through the Commonwealth of Goblins: their Nature, Habits and Society Revealed, which now, sadly, remains extant in only one much mutilated and aged manuscript. Tralk's journal and its revealing study of the goblin peoples has earned him a place amongst history's greatest scholars and there follows a condensed and modernised version of his study, featuring all the salient points that might interest the casual scholar.

Argument: in this study 'goblin' is treated as a generic term describing three similar racial types that together constitute an unusual aboriginal anachronism. These goblins ranged from simple, hirsute beings of diminutive stature and 'pack' orientated nature, to intelligent, doughty semi-civilised 'pagani'. In my studies of the goblins, I found no evidence to suggest that goblins are chaotic beings, rather they appear as creatures who are balanced as mankind.

THE THREE RACES – A Brief Description The Lesser Goblins

These creatures appear to occupy the same ecological niche as Runners in Glorantha and are quite similar in some ways.

Lesser Goblins are small hirsute creatures, generally brown in colour and, unlike their more developed brethren, possess a covering of body hair. They have excellent sight, hearing and smell and are attentive at all times. They are inquisitive but shy creatures, that will rarely trouble travellers unless they are either incited to do so by their larger brethren or the travellers in any way threaten or trespass upon their 'sacred' areas.

I believe these creatures represent the original form of the goblin peoples. They are small, usually harmless woodland denizens, who subsist on small mammals, birds, roots, fruit, nuts and fungi. Culturally they enjoy the lowest form of society, living in what can only be described as packs and possessing minimal technology. They live in the trees without the benefit of fire, but forage primarily on the forest floor. These primitives use clubs, slings and nets (which they manufacture themselves from creepers). They possess a simple language that sounds rather like the chatter of starlings.

They have no developed religion beyond an apparently comprehensive belief in animism (the belief that all objects are imbued with sentient life), and this primarily manifests itself in their awe and respect for certain groves and old trees. This respect may be divided into two categories:

a. Respect for the various packs 'nesting' areas – for whilst these creatures are nomadic they do tend to frequent established nesting grounds.

b. Veneration or awe for certain ancient trees or standing groves. Any creature that is spotted approaching a nesting area will be harried to lead it away from the site or to deter its advance. Any creature that is deemed to have desecrated holy ground will usually be hunted down and punished.

Whilst these creatures hunt for their meat at dusk they also utilise most of the morning to forage on the forest floor, and as a result it is not unknown for the Forest Goblins to use them as sentries.

The Common Goblins

These are the most common of the three types. They are gangrel in appearance, have little if any body hair, and have gray-brown skin (however their appearance may vary as they tend to smear themselves with mud, dung or ashes for hunting and ritual purposes). These beings' nocturnal habits, sepulchre type habitations and general appearance have linked them with the dead in the civilised mind. In fact, I have discovered this to be untrue. They have good eyesight and hearing, and a semi-civilised tribalistic society. They have been known to train wolves to assist them in their hunting; possess a more developed religion than pure animism, and have a higher technological base than their lesser brethren. (See the culture section for more information).

Hob-Goblins

STR: 2d6+6
CON: 2d6+6

POW: 3d6

Battle Magic: See cult listings (forthcoming issue).

Having compared my old records to the new, the Hob-goblins appear to be a new development in the goblin race. Hob-goblins are usually well-proportioned intelligent creatures – born leaders in the goblin world. Their skin colouration and sense are similar to the Common Goblin, but many belong to the cult of Crom Cruach (future issue) and permanently stain their skin a gray-green. The cult of Crom Cruach is elitist, militaristic and extremely ritualised – it is developed further in the cults chapter.

The History and Genesis of the Goblins

According to the records of the Ancients, goblins were originally a nomadic race when and how they choose to.

who roamed the plains and valleys, and competed for the food supplies with our ancestors. They had no recorded agriculture and only a loosely knit tribal culture, and proved no match for humanity. Our ancestors stampeded the goblins' herds and slowly liquidated their tribes. Unable to compete, the goblins were gradually pushed out of the fertile plains and into the hills, mountains, marshes, moors, forests and woodlands of the world. This change in habitat not only affected their culture but also engendered a number of varying changes in their physical nature – resulting in a number of quite distinct groups.

Spriggans

Those who fled to the hills, moors and mountains quickly found that the land was generally inhospitable and the food supply was restricted. Their initial reaction was to raid each other and the surrounding lands of our ancestors. However, the fratricidal raiding merely reduced their population, whilst the raids into the lowlands usually provoked a swift response in the form of a hunt, that normally resulted in the end of the raiding party or the whole of the tribe that originated it. Under these pressures what little society the goblins did have collapsed and they reverted to the family nucleii.

Today goblins are still known to inhabit these areas, but in much reduced numbers and they are commonly called spriggans. (All stats as per the Common Goblin but the Camouflage skill is raised to 60% and they possess the following 'magical ability': using low clouds, shadows or the twilight spriggans are able to project an image of themselves that suggests a form which is larger than life. Seeing these images acts as a demoralize spell against each witness, who, if overcome will then have to make a saving roll at two times his intelligence or run-away. The image(s) will possess the power of the highest Spriggan caster for resistance purposes and will cost one point of power per caster).

Spriggans subsist on the poor game supplies of the highlands and any foodstuffs they can acquire through theft or ambush. They are known to make occasional raids on human farmsteads, and some farmers leave offerings at standing stones as insurance against such occurrences. The Spriggans are crepuscular by nature and tend to live in bee-hive huts which they construct out of small boulders and turfs. Little is known of their religion, but as their society revolves around the family unit, it seems reasonable to presume that they practice some form of ancestor worship.

Marsh or Fen Goblins: Wisps

Those who fled to the wetlands found a large if not wholly agreeable food supply, but it would appear that their numbers were quickly decimated by sickness and the attacks of gorps, walktapi etc. It is commonly believed that these goblins are no more, but some may still exist. Wisps would be shy wary creatures with splayed hands and feet for movement around the marsh. They would have a 70% Camouflage rating (how else do you think they survived?), and a CON equal to Hob-goblins – otherwise all Common Goblin stats apply.

Modern philosophers believe the spirits of these goblins are responsible for the manifestations known as Will-O-Wisps.

Forest (Common) Goblins

The most successful goblins were those who fled to the woods and forests – the very regions of their primordial origins. These areas were well stocked with food and offered a secure base in which to raise families. At first, they undoubtedly retained their nomadic lifestyle because they had no knowledge of agriculture, but with the discovery of mushroom farming and the domestication of wolves (which extended their hunting range and increased the chance of a kill) the goblins were able to establish small villages and develop a more stable culture.

Hob-goblins

The Ancient's records suggest that after the goblins were driven from the plains they degenerated into the physical beings we now know. Thus they are now a shadow of their former selves and have adopted crepuscular and nocturnal habits which man associates with vermin and the dead.

However, perhaps due to the prolonged period of peace (through isolation) the Forest Goblins have enjoyed, a new strain of goblin has appeared, known as Hob-goblin. These beings are usually found in positions of power amongst the goblins and usually belong to the exclusive cult of Crom Cruach (The Dark Serpent, see future issues).

Culture of the Forest Goblins

Chieftains assume their status through prowess in hunting or combat. There is evidence to suggest that originally the goblin chieftain was chosen on an annual basis and only on the hunting ground – during the Festival of Renewal. But this practice has been overruled in many places by the bullying tactics of the servants of Crom Cruach, who tend to decide the chieftainship by advancing a candidate who will kill the existing chieftain.

Since the discovery of mushroom farming, goblins have been able to found small, static communities, where cottage industries such as tanning and flint fashioning have begun to flourish. However, whilst hunting is no longer their only source of nourishment it is still their most important source of food, and the goblins have developed a number of ways to enhance their hunting abilities. They have learned to exploit their lesser brethren to trap small mammals and birds in return for gifts of darts, mushrooms, cured skins and clubs and have learned to fish using barbed spears. They have succeeded in domesticating wolves to track, chase, kill and then return game to the village. Wolves are also used as mounts by some of the smaller goblins.

They use flint and bone to arm their weapons and wattle to make shields. They have some access to pottery but usually use skins to carry liquids and cook food by spit-roasting or baking it with hot stones.

Goblins are known to use caves as bolt holes or living quarters but they generally live in sunken round houses. These houses are between 10' and 20' in diameter, 3' and 5' in height outside, and 4' to 6' inside. They are usually raised where the soil has good drainage, but around the edge of the floor a shallow trench is normally dug, to take excess water and waste. Goblin huts have only one crawl-way entrance and a smoke-hole. They are built out of saplings, wattle and turf. (From a distance players will have to make a Spot Hidden roll to spot these huts and if a heavily laden player steps on one there is a chance it will cave in). These huts are sometimes raised solely to house mushrooms.

The goblins enjoy a low level of technology and there is no evidence to suggest they have any metallurgical skills. Consequently if they are found with bronze weapons they will have either been stolen, given, or bought. □

White Dwarf

27-29 Sunbeam Road,

London NW10 6JP.

Dear WD,

May I bestow my humble thanks upon Marcus Rowland and put my seal of approval on his article Stop Thief. 'Twas a sight for shifty eyes, and a pleasure for nimble fingers to hold. Never again will rich lords awaken to find me helping myself to their ready cash. Never again will the gas cloud or poison dart catch me unawares. Never again will gentlemen in the street realise as I steal their purses of gold. And at last I will be the hero of the party as I aid our band to escape from pursuing assailants.

Having grovelled sufficiently to Rowland, I would now like to know when we will see a guide to setting up traps. If I knew how to set the things up, dismantling them would be easier still.

Yours,

Toby Day, London.

ps Could we see a regular spot for Warhammer.

Thanks for the praise – I'm sure Marcus Rowland will be pleased. A regular Warhammer spot is unlikely, given the number of departments we have at the moment. However, there will be more articles/scenarios on Warhammer, rest assured. An article on Traps. Hmmm – anyone got any ideas? Marcus? –Ed.

Dear WD,

I feel that, arising from the points brought out by your correspondence over the last 6 months concerning castles and armies in D&D, come several clear answers. Any RPG must strive for at least a degree of 'realism', and these two are elements which, if excluded from D&D, would substantially alter the 'feel' of the game – there are several references to both troops and to castles in all of the D&D works.

The point is not to sacrifice fantasy for a greater degree of 'realism', or vice versa, but to provide a rationale or logical basis for both aspects of a campaign. To threaten Divine Intervention to prevent the use of magic in pitched battles seems to me to be one excellent rationale, for example – one that does not suit my campaign, however, for there is no mention of pit-fiends or Gruumsh in my 'historical records'. But for a campaign this is fine. I do not feel there is a need to provide a list of alternative deterrents, for each must be consistent with the individual campaign (for the record, in my campaign MU's are few and far between).

As for the heated discussion about castles, it is a waste of time to criticise Lew Pulsipher's excellent articles which provide one possible alternative. If you prefer genuine castles then you have to think of a better one for your particular campaign.

A possibility is the invocation of the gods at the castles' completion to render the walls impassable. This would leave only the danger from thieves – an interesting danger and one which could provide some excellent scenarios (remember Shogun?). As I said before, this is not necessary for my own campaign and would be incompatible with its atmosphere. If you prefer more magic, then use Lew's idea, but add complex drainage systems and escape routes, or declare that Decanters of Endless Water do not exist! Finally, the real reason for this letter is that I dislike the destructive criticisms offered by other players for systems which are, after all, suggestions, and ones which could work in a given D&D campaign. If you don't like the inconsistencies produced by following every article to its logical conclusion, change your campaign or try RuneQuest!

Yours,

Edward Whittaker, Oxford.

Dear WD,

While I agree with some comments of Chris Elliot and Richard Edward in connection with fortifications [WD44], I disagree with their conclusions.

Whether the defenders would be bottled up in a dungeon by the besiegers is doubtful. The defenders can dig new tunnels for egress. A long, narrow tunnel could be constructed without great danger of detection, in time. Because individuals can be so much more powerful in fantasy than in reality, a small party can be a strong sally-force. If done at night, this is hardly 'sallying forth into the teeth of a waiting army.'

If the outer defenses of a castle have been taken or destroyed by the attacker, the defenders are clearly overmatched in strength and have no practical chance of sortieing successfully. If they are strong enough for that, they would have been strong enough to prevent the loss of their outer defense line. Hence, the defenders' only hope is to hold out until the attackers give up or help arrives. If this is true, then a group of defenders in a dungeon are much better off than a group of defenders in a much-more-vulnerable inner castle or keep. It is no easier for the attackers to invest an underground fortress than an over-ground fortress, if they want to leave with the bulk of their army.

Consequently, the part-underground castle serves the purpose of a castle better: to keep the enemy army occupied, not to kill the enemy or 'set the cost of an attack high enough to deter casual aggression'. A castle of any design can always be overcome without significant loss by a sufficiently well-organized and powerful army, merely by starvation and psychological warfare. But this army, though winning the battle, will lose the war if it takes too long.

The castle as sole fortified residence of a magnate is a different matter from a group of strategically placed castles backed up by a field army, for he may not be able to expect help. Nonetheless, I'd much rather hole up in a dungeon than in a keep.

I am thoroughly unimpressed by the value of a surface keep or wall as a firing platform. You can't shoot what you can't see, and with few exceptions no-one can see more than 60 feet on a dark night. The attacker can see and mark in daylight exactly where doors and windows are in surface defenses, in order to deal with them at night. When troops who can see in the dark make up the attacking force, most assaults will be at night. Moreover, stone buildings lack the amount of room for defense in depth that a dungeon provides, so once the attackers get through a door or two in the keep (they have many ways) the defenders are beaten.

Excavation underground in a D&D world is much easier than in the medieval world because there are more experienced diggers (those who often live underground by choice) who can be hired or enslaved. Digging also requires less skill than building above ground, and hence is a more suitable situation for slavery.

I've found that most of the clever ideas put forward for easily accomplishing this or that in AD&D fall flat upon closer examination. For example, Chris and Richard suggest use of a Decanter of Endless Water to drown a dungeon. But calculation shows that at a rate of 30 [US] gallons a minute, it would take 1.73+ days to fill a 10 by 10 by 100 foot corridor, hardly a large volume. This assumes no seepage, no natural chimneys that carry away water, and no well dug by the constructors. Assuming that a thief or assassin could get the Decanter down there – a very doubtful assumption – why won't the defenders simply find the Decanter after it's run awhile and break it, thus ending the flow? Even if it is indestructible, it shouldn't be hard for a few strong men to move it up and out of the dungeon. If an entire party was in the dungeon, and set traps around the Decanter, I still think this would be a minor irritant rather than a major disaster for the defense. After all, they'll have many days to act. Similarly, the threat of flooding from outside can be dealt with by sensible castle placement – rivers aren't easily moved uphill! – and by properly constructed ingress.

Sincerely,

Lew Pulsipher, USA.

Dear WD,

In the last part of my Dealing with Demons series [WD46], some of the powers of Lord Adelmar were listed under the description of Lord Tsienra. I hope that none of your readers thought that these were more of the latter's powers and wasted a summoning or something as a result.

May Adelmar curse your proofreader with shrivelling winds of senility and decay.

Cheers,

Dave Morris, Woking.

The Phulgk'k'k'k

The Phulgk'k'k'k are a small (4' long), amphibious minor race inhabiting Thgg'k'llu (literally 'sea shore, indefinitely extended'), which humaniti call Vashoon's World, Thagg, or Longshore. The race resembles Terran crustacea (nickname 'lobsters') but is highly evolved; the exoskeletal carapace has a complex, flexible structure, the two pincers are incorporated in handlike members, and brain size is quite respectable. They have a multitude of lensless eyes on 'stalks' (giving a wide angle of vision, but poor focus), concealed hearing organs of moderate efficiency, and a vast array of chemical 'taste/smell' organs (Longshore has a complex mixture of gases, generally vented from volcanoes; sensitivity to the flow and pattern of these is a strong survival attribute).

Phulgk'k'k'k breathe air and water, preferring water, and appear to have evolved from scavenger/intermittents. UPP as follows:

Strength:	1d+1	Intelligence:	2d-1
Dexterity:	2d-3 (min 2)	Base Education:	1d
Endurance:	1d+2	Social Standing:	1d+1

Phulgk'k'k'k fight with two claws for 1d damage each; their carapace is treated as mesh armour. Most have some useful skills; calculate Base Educ + 1d-3, with a positive result being the number of rolls on the following table; use 1d for this, with DM +1 if education (base or after earlier rolls) is 6+;

1: +1 Endurance	4: Liaison
2: Combat	5: Alien Lore
3: Mechanical	6,7: +1 Education

Note: Combat gives a plus DM in claw attacks, equal to half the skill level rounded up. Combat 1-3 also gives carbine-1/2; Combat 4+ gives carbine-1 (see below on guns). Alien Lore gives an understanding of non-Phulgk'k'k'k psychology, society, and tastes; without it, operating in the interstellar community is difficult.

They have limited territorial drives, and the mating urge is weak until triggered by a complex set of circumstances. Their chief drive is derived from their non-sentient ancestors' danger/food gathering instinct, producing a tendency to rush in, make a quick claw attack or grab for food, then flee swiftly. Thus Phulgk'k'k'k are impetuous, but rarely sustain enthusiasm; they usually 'think better' of their first actions within minutes. Phulgk'k'k'k society has developed ways of controlling this rush/panic pattern: they confront all tasks by forming 'committees', which continually recruit and lose members to maintain a balance of enthusiasm and caution. Consequently, lone Phulgk'k'k'k, often behave erratically. Through interstellar trade tech level is now 4. One industry is the manufacture of light, waterproof guns (treat as carbines), designed for Phulgk'k'k'k use.

Phulgk'k'k'k with Alien Lore 2+ can attune their superb chemical senses to the particular tastes of other races; thus they make skilled cooks, perfumiers, and the like. Phulgk'k'k'k can be encountered throughout the Imperium on such work, or on trade or diplomatic missions. Player characters may even find work as bodyguards to a millionaire's chef, or pilots to Phulgk'k'k'k travellers.

Phulgk'k'k'k are not recommended as player characters, as they prefer breathing water, require special diets, and have a peculiar psychology that may be hard to role-play properly.

The Ghashruan

Ghashruan originate on Ghashrua, a desert world lying within the Hiver Federation. Its inhabitants may be encountered throughout Hiver space, the Imperium, and other regions. This planet is mostly covered in wind-blown sand, but enough 'oasis' regions exist to support a complex ecology, in which an intelligent species has evolved from omnivore/hunter stock. The Ghashruan are small (average 1-1¼m), hunched-looking beings with leathery grey skins, two arms, two legs, torso and head, and long, splayed fingers and toes (four per hand and foot), which allow them to move swiftly on soft sand – especially when they drop to all fours, (speed 2 when on all fours in open country). They have little taste sensitivity, and can smell only water vapour, but their hearing and eyesight are both acute.

When the Hivers first contacted the Ghashruan, they found a tribal, bronze-age society. Population pressure in the oases led to a pattern whereby youths of both sexes traditionally went out 'questing' upon maturity – the race retains an adventurous, 'tribalistic' culture, despite a Hiver-aided advance to high technology. Such impulses can easily conflict with Hiver non-violent co-operation, but Ghashruan are adventurous rather than simply violent, and their tradition of personal loyalty ensures them a place in the Federation.

If Hiver naval vessels are ever encountered, any ships troops may be Ghashruan. The Federation army has some all-Ghashruan regiments, where loyalty and pride run extremely high (in Striker terms, treat as Aslan, with initiative requirement levels raised by one). The armed forces of Ghashrua itself are equipped to tech level 12, and serve both as planetary police and as reserve units for the Federation.

Some Ghashruan mercenaries exist outside the Federation; the Hivers tolerate this provided that other races' laws and traditions are not violated. Within the Imperium, Ghashruan mercenaries are regarded as good, but slightly unpredictable (treat as Vargr in Striker terms).

Ghashruan characters are generated normally with these adjustments; -1 to strength, +1 to endurance, -2 to education. Those with education 0 are 'backwood' Ghashruan, and automatically qualify as Barbarians, with no other choices open; others may join any of the services, as per humans, with the following DMs on enlistment (not on re-enlistment); Scouts, all military services, +2; Barbarians, +1; Pirates, Belters, -1; Bureaucrats, Sailors, -3. Ghashruan can go for three times as long as humans without water, with +1 on morale. They have little time for bureaucratic niceties; if a member of the race receives a level of Admin skill, it is 50% likely to be converted to +1 Education instead.

The race has a complex, but sometimes flexible, code of honour and respect, making their response to other beings highly unpredictable except when matters of honour or duty are concerned; to represent this, reaction roll is double the result.

If players wish to utilise Ghashruan characters, they must act with Ghashruan psychology, which referees should also try to bear in mind at all times. Courage, loyalty, and some impatience with other beings are central, as is tolerance of hardship and any waiting imposed by physical (rather than administrative) necessity. Younger Ghashruan (up to about 28-30 Terran years) tend to the greatest adventurousness, and have an impulse to 'prove themselves' to anyone who they respect; their elders will form and declare strong group loyalties, often combined with some vague loyalty to the Federation. All loyalty is to the death, although Ghashruan will demand fair treatment within their chosen group. □

IRILIAN

A Complete AD&D City by Daniel Collerton Part 6: Darkrise on Irilian

This is the final instalment in the series which has been describing a small AD&D town, Irilian, and providing a sequential scenario; The Rising of the Dark. As before, it is intended for a moderately large, thinking party of 2nd to 5th level characters with some assistance from Irilian's characters. This issue's scenario carries on directly from where Part 5 left off. See Part 1 [WD42] for a glossary and nomenclature key.

The Tunnel. The mist wall will follow the party along the east passage, cutting off light and sound from the well. The walls, shedding a dim white radiance, will gradually become obscured as tendrils of black mist start to twine across the walls and floor. These tendrils grasp the characters and, although insubstantial, their touch will numb: slowing characters' movements to half normal. Soon the passage will be completely blocked; cutting off all sight of the Light ahead. Then two Shadow Demons [FF] AC 9, 5 or 1, HD 7+3, Move: 12", No of Attacks: 3, Damage: 1d8/2x1d6, Special Attacks: To Hit plus in low light, Special Defences: Immune to fire, cold and lightning. Others depending upon light level. HP 29, 24, will step out of the walls and attack.

After defeating them and moving on, the thunder of rapidly approaching hooves mixed with the howls of wolves and screams of 'Deorc Rys' (Dark Rise) will be heard. From the mist ahead will burst two Death Dogs [FF] AC 7, HD 2+1, Move: 12", No of Attacks: 2, Damage: 2x1d10, Special Attacks: Disease, HP 9, 7, closely followed by a Death Knight [FF] AC 0, HD 9d10, Move: 12", No of Attacks: 1, Damage: 1d8 (Longsword), Special Attacks: Spells, Special Defences: Spells, Magic Resistance: 75%, HP 39, mounted on a Nightmare [MM] AC -4, HD 6+6, Move: 15"/36", No of Attacks: 3, Damage: 2d4/2x2d4+2, Special Defences: Smoke screen, HP 41. These will fight to the death. However, if they appear to be winning, a roar of Light from the passage's end will engulf and destroy them. The Light comes from a ball of burning light in the centre of an arched chamber which opens out after half a mile or so.

The fire is a manifestation of the Light which has been protecting the party so far. A character must, of her or his own free will, step into it. Then the fire will blaze up, blinding everyone for a turn and consuming whoever stepped into it. It will then fade to reveal the naked character, unchanged but for a coruscating aura of blue-white diamond fire, which flares about it.

With extreme effort, the character may extend this aura to encompass a thirty foot radius about itself, destroying any manifestations of the Dark in the area. This is so demanding that it may only perform this five times before being destroyed.

In stepping into the fire, the character becomes part of the Light; the Lightchild. Through the Lightchild Irilian may be saved although, as it will realise, the prophecy song must be fulfilled. This means that the Lightchild must be consumed in a funeral pyre; specifically in the Temple fire pit. The Lightchild has 100 hit points for the purpose of attacks by Children of the Dark [see WD46 for Dark Children], and will need to get to the Temple.

The party will be able to reach the well without difficulty but they will discover a group of 10 Orc Dark Children [MM and Part 5] AC 6, HD 1, Move: 9", No of Attacks: 1, Damage: 1d8, Special Attacks: Possession, HP (Dark [Body]) 6x6(6), 3x6(4), 5(4), who have roped themselves down to the passage. If these are destroyed, the party may use these ropes to climb back up.

Back on the Streets. Two rounds after the party leaves the well, 30 Goblin [MM] Darkchildren AC 6, HD 1-1, Move: 6", No of Attacks: 1, Damage: 1d6, Special Attacks: Possession, HP (Dark [Body]) 15x5, 10x4, 4x3, 2, will block the party's path. These will be joined later by:

Round 1: 1 Troll [MM] Darkchild AC 4, HD 6+6, Move: 12", No of Attacks: 3, Damage: 2x1d4+4/2d6, Special Attacks: Possession, Special Defences: Regeneration, HP 29(27).

Round 2: 2 Ogres [MM] Darkchildren AC 5, HD 4+1, Move: 9", No of Attacks: 1, Damage: 1d10, Special Attacks: Possession, HP 20(16), 17(12).

Round 3: 14 Kobolds [MM] Darkchildren AC 7, HD 1/2, Move: 6", No of Attacks: 1, Damage: 1d4, Special Attacks: Possession, HP 10x3(3), 4x3(2).

Round 4: 6 Bugbears [MM] Darkchildren AC 5, HD 3+1, Move: 9", No of Attacks: 1, Damage: 2d4, Special Attacks: Surprise, Possession, HP 4x12(11), 10(9), 9(8).

Round 5: 9 Orcs [MM] Darkchildren AC etc as before. HP 6x6(6), 2x5(5), 5(4).

Round 6: 1 Frost Giant [MM] Darkchild AC 4, HD 12, Move: 12", No of Attacks: 1, Damage: 4d8, Special Attacks: Possession, Throw rocks for 2d10, Special Defences: Immune to cold, HP 50(38).

Children of the Dark released from the Dark's control will fight for Light. In round two, the surviving Irilian Scouts will arrive to help the party [Part 4 but down to half Hit Points and with all spells used]. Four rounds after that, the Gran Mareschal of the Monastery [Part 4] will arrive with Sil, Ral, Quan, Ged and their men at arms accompanied by Teng; summoned either by the Light or Ras's horn. They will help the party to the Temple.

At the Mark Geard, the Irilians will be making a final stand. The remnants of the Garde and the Militia will be strung out from Diamant Rad to Geld Laen. Behind them, a dense crowd of old men and women and children are praying; above them, Aslas and her pentacle still burn; and to their front, a wall of mist hangs, poised. All around, lightning forks from the stormy sky to the roof tops.

As the party appears, the mist will rise up until it covers the entire western half of the sky and then start to advance. The Lightchild should go to the Temple fire-pit. As it does so, the Temple will darken until the only light comes from the figure in the flames. Gradually, the Light will increase until, cracking with power and of a blinding intensity, it blasts from the Temple doorway, across the Mark Geard, into the Dark; spreading, leaping from house to house and person to person, until the whole of Irilian is ablaze with white fire.

Around the town walls, the Dark will rise higher; drawing greater power to itself before tumbling over the walls and sweeping once again to the Mark Geard. The Light will dim then flare up, striking the senses from all in Irilian. When the population awakes, it will be dawn; a golden sun rising into a cloudless sky: The Dark laid. Of the Lightchild, there will be no sign.

Aftermath. Within one season of Darksfall, Irilian will be much as it always was. When the Light laid the Dark, all of its works in Irilian were undone; thus all who were trapped in Blaec Fyr were released unharmed (the humanoids wisely instantly taking to their heels). Reconstruction will have finished by then and prominent citizens will have resumed their normal stations. (If the party failed, the DM may start a new party off, either assuming that the Dark never existed and that the players' knowledge comes from living in Irilian for a while, or having them penetrate into Dark-controlled Irilian; attempting to lay it.)

If the party do survive, the Counsel will vote them the following rewards: 1. To them and their heirs in perpetuity; the freedom of Irilian with exemption from all taxes (but not duties) and automatic citizenship. 2. To them and their heirs in perpetuity; lordship over all the lands between the Iril and the Sil [Part 1] from their confluence to the Searp mountains, subject to the Overlordship of the Council Aef Irilian; with all the goods, chattels, habitments, persons and incomes therein, subject to a yearly tithe to the Council Aef Irilian. (Unfortunately, the lands to the north are lost to Irilian and are occupied by several major humanoid tribes and numerous monsters; all of which will need to be pacified or destroyed before the territory could become profitable. It is up to the individual DM to provide further details if wished.) 3. To them for the remainder of their lives: a pension of 500 gold pieces each per year.

Teral Guthdohtor Aef Abbeie will express her thanks by raising, resurrecting, healing etc (except for the Lightchild who, by its sacrifice saved Irilian, cannot be recalled by any power on the Prime Material Plane) and, of course, the other citizens of Irilian will treat them like local heroes.

Irilian may be used as a basis for further adventures by the DM. The party will have made powerful allies and enemies, both of which will seek to use them for their own ends and the town is the ideal base from which to subjugate their new territories.

Background Information

Irilian Law. There are four categories: Military, Religious, Civil and Criminal. Each has different courts and penalties and deals with different crimes.

Military Law. Deals with all offences committed by members of the Garde and the Militia when on duty. Crimes are reported to an officer who then has the power to arrest the suspect and confine him in the Riverweac

Tor until trial. Minor crimes (those punishable by flogging) are heard before the Commandere Aef Man or Aef Hors. Serious crimes go to the Garde Cort. This consists of the Garde Commandere, who acts as Profost-Mareschal, the Commandere Aef Hors and the Commandere Aef Man. Guilt is determined by a majority verdict. The accused may nominate a friend to argue his case or provide his own defence. Bribery may help a not guilty plea. Punishments for criminal offences such as theft, murder and rape are as in the Cort Criminari. Military crimes have these penalties:

Cowardice:	Flogging.
Negligently carrying out a duty:	Flogging.
Refusing to carry out an order:	First Offence – Flogging, Second offence – Death by drowning.
Desertion:	Death by drowning.
Mutiny:	Decimation by drowning.

Flogging is usually 10-100 lashes with a system shock roll needed to survive every 40. Military Law is, in general, strictly enforced although the Scouts tend to operate at its outer limits.

Religious Law. Crimes committed by members of the Religious in Irilian and various other crimes are tried by the Temple Cort. This is made up of the Abbeiss of the Abbeie, the Gran Mareschal of the Monasterion and the Primat Aef Irilian; conviction is by a majority verdict and bribery is of some use in swaying it. Accused must present their own defences. Prosecutions may only be initiated by a member of the Cort but anyone may report a transgression with a request that it be acted upon. The Brothors Aef Lagu will usually hold suspects for trial. Conviction for a civil or criminal offence in the Temple Cort will lead to the criminal being unfrocked and handed over to the Corts Civilis or Criminari for a quick retrial and punishment. Penalties for religious crimes are:

Desecration:	Death by starvation.
Heresy:	Death by burning.
Blasphemy:	Minor (swearing) – 1 wika in stocks by Temple door. Major – Death by starvation.
Sacrilege:	Death by burning.

Religious Law is laxly enforced; it being notoriously easy to secure an acquittal because of the inter-cult squabbles which dominate the Temple Cort's workings.

Civil Law. All wrong-doing involving taxes, duties, debts, contracts, merchandising and property are dealt with in the Cort Civilis: the Coroune, two Counseil members and the Clerc [Part 4]. Any Irilian may move a prosecution by a sworn deposition to the Coroune who will then have a Landvogt deliver a summons to the accused to appear before the Cort. Both accuser and accused may be represented by scrivener-lawyers (aS39 2 Luft Met Weg). Conviction is by a majority verdict; the Clerc does not vote. Punishments are:

Evading taxes or duties:	Fine equal to twice the evasion plus 20 lashes.
Debt:	Confiscation of property to the value of the debt plus 50%.
Breach of Contract:	Fine.
Fraud:	Fine plus up to 100 lashes.
Giving false measure:	Fine plus 1 wika in the Mark Geard stocks.
Action for damages or libel:	Fine equal to damage done plus 50%.
Carrying out a business without Gild permission:	Confiscation of tools plus fine and 1 wika in the Mark Geard stocks.

Fines range from 50sp to 10000gp depending upon circumstances; averaging a few hundred silver pieces. Criminals unable to pay a fine are, if possible, sold into slavery along with their families to raise funds.

The Cort Civilis is convened on Fyrdaeg of Storm, Waeter, Hael and Vale of each seson. Civil law is not enforced in Irilian unless the Counseil wants it to be. Thus it is used against the populous rather than for it and abuses against it, especially by Counseil members, are very common and virtually unpunished.

Criminal Law. This covers all offences against person and property. Suspects caught committing a crime may be immediately arrested by the Garde or any Irilian citizen; the latter must, however, hand the suspect over to the Garde as soon as possible. In practice, citizens usually send a Hue and Cry rather than attempt an arrest themselves. If the suspect is not caught in the act or manages to escape pursuit, any witnesses must make a sworn statement to the Scirgefefa who will make out a warrant for the Typstoeft and Garde to apprehend the suspect. Suspects awaiting trial or punishment are imprisoned in the Riverwaec Tor.

Crimes are tried before the Cort Criminari, the Scirgefefa and four Counseil members assisted by the Clerc. Convictions are by majority verdict – heavily influenced by the bribes offered. A defendant may be represented by a scrivener-lawyer. Common punishments are:

Treason or rebellion:	Death by hanging, drawing and quartering.
Murder:	Death by hanging.
Assault:	First offence – Up to 500 lashes, Second offence – Loss of left eye, Third offence – Death by beheading.
Rape:	First offence – Loss of left hand, Second offence – Death by hanging.
Arson:	First offence – Loss of ears and branding on forehead, Second offence – Death by burning.
Theft:	First offence – 80 lashes, Second offence – Loss of right hand and nose, Third offence – Death by hanging.
Failing to obey a summons:	First offence – Confiscation of all property, Second offence – Banishment under pain of death by beheading.
Failure to obey a member of the Garde on duty:	50 lashes.

Suspects who are not arrested or who escape from custody may be tried in absentia. If found guilty, they are declared Utlagu – outside the Law – and may be hunted down and killed with impunity. The Cort Criminari sits on Earthedaeg of each week; punishments are usually carried out the following Monadaeg. Although the criminal law is not quite so corruptly enforced as the civil law, it is difficult obtaining a conviction against someone with influence or, especially, money.

Trials. In deciding whether a character is convicted of a crime or not, the DM should consider the following points.

The character's standing in Irilian: citizen or non-citizen, rich or poor, respectable or 'adventurous', charismatic or not, famous or notorious, popular or not, and so forth. The number and standing of witnesses. The standing of the person moving the prosecution. Material evidence. The political position of the Counseil. The characters and political positions of the members of the Cort. The bribes paid on both sides and the Bribe Levels of the Cort. Bearing these in mind, the DM should arrive at a percentage chance for conviction which can then be rolled against.

Hue and Cry. Alerts all those within 80 feet who will attempt to pursue and grapple the suspect so rendering him or her incapable of action until the Garde arrives. Up to 3d20 people may form the pursuing crowd; all with the statistics of normal Irilians. None will risk their lives.

Encounters. With a little thought, most encounters may be used to lead on to something. The suggested encounters given should be changed or ignored as circumstances dictate, and varied with the time of year as well as of day since festivals, for example, will dictate what is happening on the streets. Encounters may either directly involve or be witnessed by the party; in the latter case, the character tables may be used to find out who else is involved. The character tables may also be used as an index of all the 'adventuring' characters and shops in Irilian except for Teral Guthdohtor Aef Abbeie [Part 2] who does not leave the Abbeie and so does not figure in them. Encounters take place on a roll of 1 on a d6, which should be rolled once per turn spent out on the streets of Irilian.

Expanding and Detailing Irilian

In this series, enough information on Irilian has been given so that it can be used in a campaign without too much further work. Areas which players are most likely to come across have been detailed fully, while giving only general descriptions of other areas – enough to provide a foundation on which the DM can build. This was due to space limitations but also so that Irilian could be fitted into other campaigns with the minimum of rewriting. DMs filling in Irilian's grey areas may find the following points useful:

In its overall structure, Irilian is very loosely based up the Italian city-states of the late middle ages and renaissance; in particular, Venice. In detail and flavour, though, it is pseudo-medieval English. Any good library will be able to provide background material and Paul Vernon's excellent series, The Town Planner [WD31-33], will also be very useful. The Irilian language is a free variant of Old English; words can be constructed by looking up the roots of modern English words in an etymological dictionary and changing the spelling slightly. Finally, I would like to thank Dominic McAteer for his helpful discussions of Irilian and AD&D. Remember, Irilian is only a suggestion; if you do not like it, change it. □

Morale

Napoleon is reported to have said that morale was three times as important as physical force, yet there is no real way of simulating it in RQ except by INT rolls or the leader making a CHA roll, neither very satisfactory. Here are two contributions bearing on the topic which deserve serious consideration. Paddy Barrow's table should perhaps be applied with caution, on occasions when a player might well be expected to be suffering from previous debauchery; but then again, anyone can wake up with a headache or a stomach-ache (especially the latter when in foreign climes!), and there are some obnoxious characters who actually seem all the better for a night's drinking. The penalties and bonuses could perhaps be scaled down, but it's worth a try. —OD.

Daily Health by Paddy Barrow

Nowhere is there any sort of reference to how a player character feels on a certain day. It might sound pedantic, but suppose he/she feels sick or has a headache: this would certainly affect overall performance in an adventure. So here is a table to determine how the player is feeling on any day. It could make a nice change for the GM to see an experienced player erupt into a fit of coughing and vomiting when confronting a solitary Trollkin, as a result of the wild party the night before.

d100
01-5	Uurrrh! Feel sick, head throbs, feet and arms hurt. See Table 1.
06-15	A bit groggy, maybe a few pains here and there. See Table 2.
16-95	Perfectly normal.
96-00	Wow! Feel great, hyper-fit, ready for anything. See Table 3.

Table 1 – 1d10

1	Everything wrong, a real griper; 50% effective in everything, including spells.
2-3	Slightly better; 75% effective in everything (round up).
4-5	Headache; -10% to all skills.
6-8	Lethargic; -15% to fighting skills and -5% to all others.
9	Prone to spells of sickness, at which point -10% to all skills; 20% chance of being unable to fight, due to heavy vomiting.
10	Dizzy spells: see Table 1a.

Table 1a – 1d8

1	Balance awful; -50% to fighting, manipulation and stealth skills.
2-5	Slightly off-balance; -10% to fighting, manipulation, and stealth skills.
6-8	Very occasional spells; -5% to the above.

Table 2 – 1d4

1	Bit stiff, muscle pains; -5% to all except knowledge and perception skills, and spell using.
2-3	Feet hurt; move at ½ normal rate.
4	Normal.

Table 3 – 1d8

1	Fanatical; fights at +15% fighting skill until below half total HPs (first fight only).
2-3	Wide-awake and eagle-eyed; +10% to perception until first major rest.
4-6	Eager; +5% to fighting and stealth skills.
7	Hyper-cool; feel as though you could talk your way out of anything, +10% to Oratory.
8	Incredible: tireless, eager +25% to fighting skills, +15% to all other except manipulation skills. This lasts until three-quarters of HPs are lost (first fight only).

Force of Will by Dave Morris

Mental Discipline is a measure of the force of a character's will, the ability to resist hypnotic patterns and melodies, the demoralising howl of a Ghoul, or the terrifying aspect of a demon. Lacking a clear definition, the RQ rules usually use a character's INT for this purpose, but this is a very unsatisfactory approximation. Standing one's ground in the face of a Ghoul pack is not necessarily a sign of intelligence, after all – and a Rune Lord will surely be more self-disciplined than the rookie Lay Member in his/her retinue, even though both may have the same INT.

A character's Mental Discipline Factor (MDF) is derived as follows:

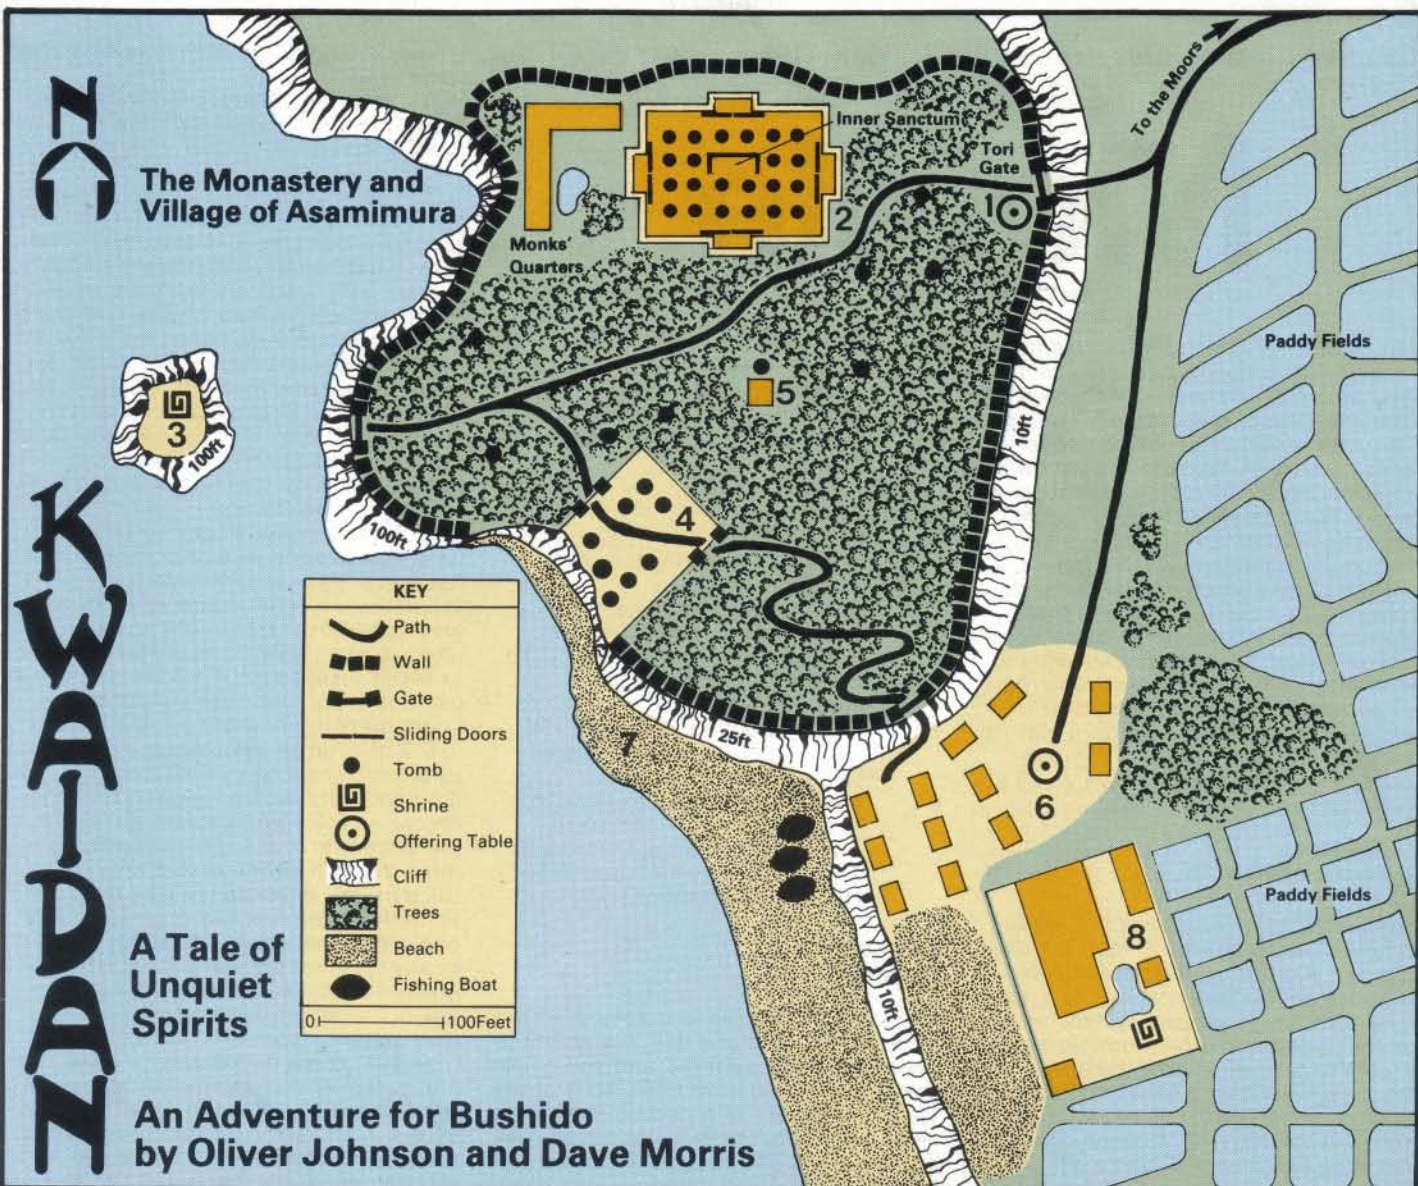

$$\text{MDF} = \frac{1}{3}(\text{CON} + \text{CHA} + \text{highest skill} \div 5)$$

CON is important on the principle of mens sana in corpore sano; a high CHA generally indicates a forceful and confident personality; and the character's highest skill level shows how experienced and disciplined he/she is (Speak Own Language does not count!). Working out Griselda's mental discipline, for example, we find that with a CON of 16, CHA of 15, and Shortsword skill at 100%, she has a MDF of 17. If the Ghoul howling at her has a POW of 15, it would have to roll 40 or less on d100 for a successful demoralization.

MDF can be used in any situation where an experienced character would have an edge over an inexperienced one. When there is an unexpected encounter, for example, the GM might have each character roll MDF times some modifier to avoid surprise. MDF x 5 would be the usual roll, but particularly startling encounters might merit a roll of MDF x 4, 3, 2 or even as a percentage. Similar rolls can be used as morale checks to see if the NPC hirelings in the party turn chicken when the going gets tough; again, the extremity of the situation will determine the MDF modifier that applies. Such morale checks should be used particularly on the first few occasions that beginning characters encounter undead of any type, to represent the superstitious terror that such beings can generate, out of all proportion to the threat they actually represent. Thus, the first time a character encounters undead, he/she must roll MDF as a percentage or be demoralized; the second time, the roll is MDF x 2, and so on. Once the character makes one of these rolls successfully, this natural fear is conquered and he/she will be okay in any future encounters with undead. (On a roll of MDF x 5, I would suppose; I feel this should always be required, unless you make a profession of hunting them. —OD)□

Player's Introduction

Your lord is worried by reports from an outlying demesne, in Kii province. Peasants have been terrorised by a spectral figure on the moors north of Asamimura village. This ghost appears to be a preta, or unquiet spirit, who will only be laid to rest by the proper segaki (exorcism) services, performed over his bones. The lord intends to test the mettle of you, his young samurai, by sending you to the village as bodyguards with Sonjo, a Buddhist monk who will perform the necessary rites.

Sonjo is likely to take most of the credit or blame resulting from the mission – the players are being sent along merely as bodyguards. Sonjo is an enlightened (but not Enlightened!) fellow and will see the value of enlisting Ugestsu's [see below] aid.

Games Master's Introduction

This scenario is loosely based around a set of classical Japanese kwaidan (or ghost stories). The games master should use his own judgement and bring in suitable encounters when appropriate rather than slavishly following order. Read through the whole scenario carefully as this will provide ideas on how to present each encounter.

Description of Asamimura Monastery/Village The Moors

As the party approach Asamimura village they will cross a stretch of barren moors, taking 4 hours. There is a 10% chance of an encounter every two hours.

1. 1-3 peasants (day only)
2. The Mujina (dusk or night only)
3. The Rokuro-kubi (night only)
4. 1 viper
5. 2-12 wolves
6. Watanabe Tetsu

She will lure people to her by sobbing and moaning as if in distress. She appears to be a normal woman, wearing a kimono made of rich material. Her face, however, is a terrifying blank, without eyes, ears or nose. When the party is ranged around her she will turn and reveal the true horror of her identity.

Out to sea and over the ruined graveyard at the monastery the dreaded demon fires, or oni-bi, can be seen to flit among the night's shadows. The squire's manor, (ji-zamurai Watanabe Tetsu) is now deserted and open to the elements. Tetsu himself had his sanity destroyed in an encounter with the Mujina. If encountered, Watanabe Tetsu will demand money from the party, swinging his katana wildly while doing so. At other times he will shout insanely about a 'faceless woman'.

Equipment: Dai-sho, a few pieces of armour.

Since being driven insane by the Mujina, Tetsu has wandered the moors terrorising travellers. He is clad scantily and is extremely dirty. If taken to the shrine of Ugetsu the kami, Tetsu will recover his wits. He is a diligent martial artist but somewhat greedy and hardly of sterling character.

Because of him, the local peasants give the area a wide berth; occasionally one may be found, but it is more likely that he or she will flee than stop and be questioned. If a peasant is questioned he or she will report that 'new people' have moved into the village, that it is indeed the local ji-zamurai who wanders about the moors and paddy fields half-naked and mad (this with some embarrassment as Tetsu was once a much respected and feared man), that a holy innocent lives in the temple of the monastery and is fed by pious villagers from outlying areas, and, that despite the ruination of the monastery, some kind spirit or person still sees to it that the dead are buried when they are left inside the temple gate. They will also report that travellers have been terrorised by a ghost on the moors, particularly religious pilgrims and men of a pious mien; they, themselves however never venture out onto the moors at night, so therefore cannot verify this.

The Monastery

1. The Torii Gate. Beyond the gate stands a leafy grove. Just inside it there is a small offering table upon which various votive candles burn. A pallet with a shrouded figure lies before the table surrounded by bowls with offerings of rice and fish. This is the corpse of an old man left there sometime during the day. If the party approach at night, they may see the Jikininki appear and devour the corpse and the offerings, but this will only occur when all the candles on the shrine have either burnt or blown out. As the players inspect the pallet they may hear a rustling in the undergrowth and then the sounds of someone or something making their way, rather clumsily, through the bushes. This will be Hoichi who, having picked up his meagre portion of food from the funeral party, is hurriedly making his way back to the ruined monastery before the Jikininki arrives for his dinner. Scattered around the grounds of the monastery where they are not obscured by the entangling undergrowth will be seen numerous go-rin-ishi (the five circle funerary stone of Nippon).

2. Amidaji Temple. Deserted for a hundred years and in some disrepair, mosses grow upon the door posts, holes are visible in the once-elegant sloping roof, trailers hang down from the eaves. Across what once must have been an ornamental pond, the monk's quarters have all but collapsed into piles of mildewed boards.

Approaching the temple, a strong smell of incense pervades the air, and (if Hoichi has not been accidentally slain or is entertaining Lord Akiyama's ghost in the graveyard) the strains of an unearthly singing with accompaniment of the highest quality from the biwa will be heard. At night, no light will appear in the inner sanctuary where the music is coming from. Unseen things will scuttle away at their approach to hide behind statues and in crevices in the cracked floor stones. The players may be alarmed when Hoichi, presenting a spectral sight, rises up before them in the darkness; he will be naked except for a loincloth, his body is covered with tattoos of the holy sutras as a ward against evil spirits, his unseeing eyes will have a glazed and faintly luminous quality. Sonjo will recognise the holiness of the tattoos immediately, but he may be too late to prevent a nervous player from striking...

Hoichi, the blind, rather timid, biwa (Nipponese lute) player who lives in the ruined monastery, will tell of certain nights when a samurai comes to fetch him and takes him to play before a great lord. Hoichi is unaware that on these nights he is playing for the ghost of Akiyama, who finds in the beautiful music a momentary surcease from his torment. Hoichi remains in the monastery precincts at all other times and is safe from the Rokuro-kubi who dare not enter. He should be treated as an 'extra' (one hit kills him) with a Biwa BCS of 19.

3. The Island of the Kami. A small dilapidated shrine made of stone and wood stands on top of the pinnacle island. The shrine was once connected to the mainland by a rope bridge which hangs severed from the side of the island. The bridge appears to have been cut from the mainland where the cut-through ends of the supporting ropes can still be seen attached to stanchions. At night oni-bi (demon fires) can be seen to flit around the island, although they are not seen in the shrine. The good Kami Ugetsu dwells in the shrine. The Rokuro-kubi who wished to dispel his benign magical influence from their stalking grounds, cut the bridge. Ugetsu will reward anyone who repairs the bridge by instruction. The only way to reach the island is to scale its vertical slopes from a boat; this will be fatal in nearly all cases (a sheer climb at -3 from Climbing capability) unless the player makes use of the rope bridge for the last fifty feet of the ascent. Despite its rotted appearance, the bridge is still magically imbued, and anyone making use of it will be protected by Ugetsu.

Ugetsu, the local Kami, is a Jigami whose shrine is set on a pinnacle of rock which could be reached via a rope bridge from the cliffs. The Rokuro-kubi cut the bridge to prevent neighbouring villagers from making offerings to him.

Skills: Tonfa-te 14, Nunchaku-te 14, Popular Dance 16, Fishing 16.

Ugetsu will appear as an impressive man in silk robes of green dyed with subtle patterns of brown reminiscent of the paddy fields.

4: The Graveyard. Here there is a 20% chance of an encounter every two hours.

1. The ghost of Tadafuno Akiyama (nights of the new moon only).

2. The Mujina (dusk or night only).

Two Torii gates (NW and E) lead into the enclosed areas which is now extremely overgrown with ferns and bramble. Around the walls stand the moss-covered go-rin-ishi (five-stone tombs) commemorating Lord Akiyama's men. In the graveyard, teetering upon the edge of the eroded cliff-face, stands a larger go-rin-ishi which covers Akiyama's grave. An inscription on one of the stones bears the lord's name although this is totally obscured by moss and lichen. Underneath are lines commemorating the sea battle that took place off Asamimura in which Akiyama perished. Players with a good memory for music may recognise in them parts of the songs recited by Hoichi in the temple (that is, if they have heard them). In front of the larger tomb and right at the edge of the cliff, there is an area of flattened grass and bracken where it appears someone has been sitting. Hoichi will be seen to sit here as he recites in front of the tomb at night; Akiyama who leads him down to the cliff's edge from the temple, fades into the five stone tomb at the beginning of the recital. The tomb could be said to resemble a seated man. Akiyama's treasure will be found buried underneath his tomb next to his funerary urn. [see stats.]

The oni-bi frequent the graveyard at all times of the night, and many can be seen whirling around Hoichi's head during his performance. Oni-bi are harmless supernatural manifestations.

At the edge of the eroded cliff parts of the graveyard's wall and the lesser tombs hang over empty space. Looking down one can see human bones protruding from the cliff-face where Akiyama's men are about to return to the watery grave a hundred feet below from whence they were pulled.

On rough stormy nights a dreadful wailing can be heard to come from out at sea. The waters are said to be haunted by the ghost of a noble warrior, Tadafuno Akiyama, who 200 years ago, died with several of his men in a sea-battle against a band of pirates. Their bodies were brought in and buried up on the cliffs and Amidaji Temple, a small Buddhist foundation, was then set up to commemorate their deaths. The sea has since eroded the cliff so that half the original graveyard has collapsed away, spilling the mortal remains into ▷ the waters below – or sometimes onto the beach, where the Rokuro-kubi come to feast on the rotted corpses. The spirit of Akiyama grows increasingly restless as his own grave will soon be breached by the erosion. His ghost roams on nights of the new moon – for on such a night was he slain – seeking a priest who will rebury him and perform the Segaki service to quieten his spirit.

The ghost is a Shura, gaunt and wild-eyed but much as Akiyama looked when alive. He speaks in a hollow tormented voice, commanding those before him to retrieve his body from its grave on the cliffs and to give it proper burial elsewhere.

5. The Anjitsu. Here stands a simple stone tomb covered by moss and lichen. Below it lie the mortal remains of the bad Buddhist priest Hobei, now a Jikininki. Players passing near the grove whilst Hobei is still in human form may hear a faint moaning sound, and, approaching nearer, even the sound of grating teeth. Instead of the tomb, the players will see an anjitsu or hermitage, in the form of a small cottage constructed of stone, with a sloping, gabled roof made of wood. This will disappear once Hobei has made his confession and segaki rites are performed over his body, or when in gaki form.

Powers: Bewilder (treat as Awe but victims never pass out and the effect vanishes when Jikininki departs). Minor Invulnerability (takes half damage from non-magical weapons).

The Jikininki is a kind of Gaki. This one was called Hobei, an ex-Buddhist monk. He usually appears as a normal man, dwelling in his anjitsu (priest's hermitage). He feeds on corpses left at the temple gate. This takes five rounds, and if Hobei is wounded he recovers 5 hit points by eating a corpse. Hobei will fight if thwarted from reaching a corpse but once he is glutted he will depart. In his human form, Hobei is surly and irascible but basically contrite about his condition. He was an avaricious priest who thought only of the payment when he performed burial rites, and this dishonour has caused him to become a Jikininki. If the party somehow find out the truth about him and confront him with it he will break down in shame and ask to be given Segaki rites. After the rites have been performed he and his hut will vanish, leaving the players beside Hobei's moss-covered tomb. Burning the body is not necessary.

The Village of Asamimura

Consists of a small ji-zamurai mansion and a dozen or so peasant huts.

By night Asamimura is stalked by such grisly nightmares as the undead Jikininki and the faceless Mujina.

The village of Asamimura is in fact quite desolate – though it appears to be inhabited by a few hardy peasants these are actually Rokuro-kubi. By night they hunt, with a 15% chance every two hours of returning to the village.

The Rokuro-kubi

Spirit Rank: 2 BAP: 12
Armour Class: 6 MNA: 2
Zanshin: 2 BMA: 5
Attack: Bite, BCS: 12, Damage 1d3 lethal.
Hit Points: Headman 15, Strongman: 18, Others 10, 11, 6, 8, 9, 10, 6, 4.
Treasure: 2 silver, 40 copper on their persons and hidden in their huts. The Rokuro-kubi all act as classic 'Average Men' by day. The Headman is crafty and Strongman is slow-witted; all the others (three women and two children plus men) are of average intelligence.

They appear by day as humble fishermen/farmers of the village. They will be hospitable and put up the party in the dilapidated manor where the squire Tetsu lived. At night they revert to type and will attempt to devour numbers of the party. If the party approaches Asamimura at night they will find the village apparently deserted with several headless bodies, in a state of perfect preservation, lying in some of the houses. Moreover the necks of the bodies will not appear severed, but look as a stalk does when a leaf has been plucked from it. The Rokuro-kubi dislike Hobei the Jikininki – he devours corpses they would like for themselves. They will tell the players that a gaki stalks the monastery grounds and it is probably this that has been terrorising travellers on the moors.

6. The Village Offering Table. Closer observation will reveal that the stone shrine at the centre of the village dedicated to the local kami, Ugetsu, has had some of its stones dislodged, perhaps in a gale. This damage has not been repaired, and further disrespect has been shown to the kami in that the fallen stones now serve as mooring stones for the fishing boats drawn up on the beach. The fishing nets laid out as if to dry next to the boats will also be seen to be in some state of disrepair if looked at closely.

7. Beach of Skulls. On the northern edge of the beach, underneath the cliffs, players may spot what appear to be small boulders and bits of white driftwood strewn about. On closer inspection they will be seen to be skulls and bones of Akiyama's men eroded from the cliff above and washed up on the beach by the tide. These relics will be brown in colour; scattered amongst them are the far whiter bones of the Rokuro-kubi's latest victims.

8. The Ji-zamurai's Mansion. There is a 15% chance of an encounter for every two hours spent in Tetsu's dilapidated house.

1. The Mujina (dusk or night only)
2. The Rokuro-kubi (appearing as normal peasants if during the day)

On close inspection, a few things will appear to be amiss:

(i) The floorboards of many of the rooms and also that of the teahouse appear to have been prised up and then roughly hammered down again. The garden appears to have been dug over thoroughly in a number of places and the earth thrown back loosely to cover the holes. This damage was caused by the Rokuro-kubi looking for Tetsu's hidden gold.

(ii) One of the bedrooms (no 3) appears to be not as dusty as the others. A few spots of brown, dried blood may be found on the underside of one of the tatami mats; the Rokuro-kubi's last victim was devoured here. A pilgrim staff will be found to have been thrown into the undergrowth of the garden.

(iii) A bow with a rotted string and a mildewed quiver of arrows will be found amongst the weeds on the southern porch (B). A target butt, partially obscured by climbing plants, stands against the southern garden wall (C); one or two arrow-heads are still stuck into it. Two burnt-out torch stubs stand to either side of it, set into the ground. Anyone with any knowledge of archery may make their BCS role to discover that the bow shows signs of fine workmanship (a 3 Man-Rating dai-kyu, worth 50 silver when refurbished).

Tetsu, was practising archery one night by the light of the torches; suddenly he heard the sound of sobbing coming from the bushes near the butt. Fearing he had accidentally wounded someone hiding in the undergrowth, he left his bow on the terrace and approached the bushes. In the light of the torches he saw a young woman kneeling on the grass with averted face. As he neared her she turned to reveal the terrible featureless face of the Mujina. Tetsu has been mad ever since and has never returned to the mansion.

A suit of armour stands in the living room (A), antique-looking with fine embossing. A now extinct clan crest is set into the helmet (the crest is of a wisteria blossom and is made of enamel). A character must make his heraldry BCS to identify as the Tadafune clan emblem. The armour belonged to Lord Tadafune. Its value is 90 gold pieces. It is reputedly haunted, and this has deterred the Rokuro-kubi from pilfering it. This rumour has basis in fact; on moonlit night a low ghostly moaning may be heard coming from it. A player approaching closer will hear Lord Akiyama's hollow voice commanding him to find a Buddhist priest so that his body may be reburied with proper rites.

A chest (lock complexity 6) stands in the storage room of Tetsu's manor. The chamber is carefully concealed behind sliding panels which resemble the woodwork of the outer walls. (Wit Saving Throw to see a Hidden Thing). Inside the chest are scrolls representing the deeds of the estate. There is also one with Tetsu's family name (Watanabe) set as a seal into wax. Anyone opening it will be confronted with the following poem:

*In the place of cha no yu
 Look westward to the setting sun,
 Bright beneath the water
 Brighter fish than goldfish swim.*

(This refers to an urn sunk by Tetsu in the middle of the pond, in it will be found 9 gold pieces).

Such accessories as torches, ropes, linen, will be found in the kitchen. □

DMs Introduction

The Necromancer [WD35], Malmart was recently forced to leave the town of Arkand, as his vile and evil practices had got out of hand. He escaped with his 'life' (badly wounded) and a few meagre possessions, including his Dorianic Portrait [see below].

He moved into an ancient burial barrow near the village of Coldbrook, itself about 50 miles from Arkand. Here, he is continuing his depraved research and has already grabbed several victims from the village to manufacture a few ghouls before returning to Arkand to have his revenge.

Dorianic Portrait
By M Abrahams

A necromancer can use this to forestall the effects of age, physical evidence of evil, hit point damage and diseases. The portrait allows the necromancer to live in society without seeming obviously vile.

To create a Dorianic Portrait a top quality full-size portrait must be obtained (at suitable expense). This must be presented to the necromancer's god during a ceremony at which the 'minimum annual sacrifice' [see WD35] must be made. If his god grants the necromancer's wish (60% chance, only attempted once a lifetime) the portrait will absorb the visible effects of evil into itself, so the picture ages whilst the necromancer looks as young, healthy and 'good' as the day of the ceremony. The loss of charisma due to level rises is negated and the necromancer seems a reasonably ordinary man (assuming he was not too corrupt when he created the portrait).

If a saving roll vs death magic is made it will heal combat damage – up to 1d4 a week, and diseases may be transferred to the portrait. Keep a note of all damage and diseases transferred in this way. If the portrait is destroyed then all the evil and stored years are transferred back to the necromancer, wherever he is. This also happens when the canvas rots of its own accord. The necromancer's charisma will drop to zero and he may well be killed by the loss of hit points/diseases. The canvas lasts d20 x 25 years. If the necromancer dies in combat then the canvas will crumble and inflict its burden on the corpse.

Consequently, Malmart is now looking relatively normal.

Players Introduction

The players are passing through the village of Coldbrook (or any village the DM would like to use this for). Not unnaturally, they decide to spend the night in the village inn.

Immediately apparent is an atmosphere of fear and insecurity. Nobody is found going outdoors at night, windows and doors are securely locked and boarded etc.

The village headman will approach the players, offer them a drink and tell them this story:

'There have been several disappearances recently. Search parties have been completely unsuccessful – no tracks have been found, no clues – nothing. The shepherd-boy, Glamis, returned last night from his day's work completely insane and babbling. He is now at home in his bed, raving.'

Treasure Chest is a regular D&D department. This issue we present a short mini-scenario based around some readers' magic items for a low level party, by Jamie Thomson.

The Portrait

He will offer 150gp (all the village can spare) to the 'warrior adventurers' if they'll help the village, discover what's going on, and put a stop to it.

The players should visit Glamis in the morning. All they will be able to gather, amid his delirious burlings, are the repeated phrases, 'winged skull', 'howling of the dead' and 'the old barrow on the hill'. Glamis is plainly terrified – out of his wits with fear... The headman will explain that the barrow on the hill is an ancient burial mound, hundreds of years old. Obviously, the players should pay it a visit.

The players will be directed to the barrow and will find the entrance set into the side of the hill, flanked by 3 large Stonehenge-type stone blocks. A smell of decay, foetid and dark, wafts from the portal. Inside, is a single cavern – about 30' x 30'. Immediately, Malmart's Skull Guard [see WD35 for stats] will attack the players. Malmart himself is nowhere to be seen. After dealing with the Skull Guard the players will see a large slab with the body of a recent victim on it, in some sort of state of preparation for some diabolical necromancy. In a corner of the tomb stands the portrait of an extremely degenerate and evil looking man. What's more the painting depicts him as severely wounded – in fact barely alive. A wooden desk (next to a straw pallet) has various items on it – dead rats, heads, bottles of blood, Books of the Dead etc, of course.

At this point Malmart himself will enter the barrow. (He was out getting food.)

Malmart, 6th level Necromancer [WD35]
Str: 18.00, Wis: 7, Int: 16, Dex: 12, Con: 15, Cha: 10 (5). Abilities: Evil Eye, Speak with Dead, Animate Dead, Grave Noises, Manufacture Ghoul, Sense Life, Create Skull Guard, Unholy Strength of the Eternally Damned (performed on himself). AC: 10. Dagger, short sword, Ebony Horn. Hit Points: 24.

Having realised he has 'guests' Malmart (looking fairly normal), will do some quick thinking and announce himself as a messenger from the village ('the headman wants to see you'), to gain a few moments time. Players may notice a certain similarity between Malmart and the portrait if they make a saving roll against intelligence. As soon as he can Malmart will blow his Ebony Horn, ordering the undead to attack the players.

Ebony Horn
by Mark Byng

This ornate black horn does not require a command word to operate but only clerics, fighters, thieves and necromancers can use it. Once per week it can be used to summon undead. When the horn is blown roll 1d10:

Die Roll	Number & Type of Undead summoned	Chance of Control
1	1-20 Skeletons	100%
2	1-10 Zombies	100%
3	1-10 Ghouls	95%
4	1-6 Shadows	90%
5	1-4 Wights	85%
6	1-4 Ghosts	85%
7	1-3 Wraiths	80%
8	1-2 Mummies	75%
9	1-2 Spectres	75%
10	1 Vampire/1 Ghost	70%/65%

On the round after blowing the horn the summoner must concentrate on controlling the undead (+5% for necromancers). Check each summoned creature individually, those undead which are controlled are completely at the summoner's command, those which aren't may do as the DM wishes. If the character activating the horn is good then he/she will be unable to control any of the summoned undead and attack on the summoner will be automatic.

The summoning lasts until the undead are slain or until 2d4 Turns have elapsed; whichever occurs first. Should there be any additional undead (victims of vampires, wraiths etc) they will disappear along with their 'masters'. If the players seem to be defeating his undead Malmart will Animate the corpse on the slab but will only enter the combat if he has to. He won't try to escape unless things are going very badly and he has his portrait. Malmart's main concern will be to keep the players away from the portrait, or to separate them from it. He will order his undead to this end. He will become very agitated if anyone goes near it. Destroying the portrait will cause Malmart to lose 22 hit points immediately and he will fall to the ground, temporarily incapacitated – any undead will stand motionless while control wavers (unless he's already wounded, in which case he'll die – no chance to curse). The players will have one free round in which to finish him off (if they've any brains!).□

MINI-MONSTERS

Tiny Terrors to cause Trials and Tribulations

DIABOLO By Phil Masters

No Appearing: 4-80
Armour Class: 9
Movement: 6"
Hit Dice: 1d4
Treasure: Individuals, L; F, W, Tx3 in lair
Attack: Knife for 1-2 points of damage plus spells
Alignment: Lawful evil
Intelligence: Exceptional

Diabolos are close relatives of kobolds (with whom they very occasionally co-operate), and are much the same size but have paler skins, larger horns, less strength and greater intelligence.

Each diabolo tribe is well organised and possesses a spell-book with the full range of first and second level MU spells, plus 2-8 third level. Each tribe member can read this, being a naturally skilled magic-user, and any diabolo can memorise up to two spell-levels (ie two first or one second level spell) for use in the normal way. In addition, all will be familiar with the full range of magical devices possessed by the tribe.

If a diabolo tribe is being randomly determined, roll 1d20 for each member and consult the following table for spell(s) memorised;

- 1-3 two sleep
- 4, 5 sleep plus charm
- 6 two charm
- 7-9 web
- 10 invisibility
- 11 sleep plus magic missile
- 12 charm plus magic missile
- 13 sleep plus shocking grasp
- 14 charm plus shocking grasp
- 15 friends plus magic missile
- 16 *sleep plus (1)**
- 17 *charm plus (1)**
- 18 *magic missile plus (1)**
- 19 *(1)* plus (1)**
- 20 (2)†

* (1) indicates any randomly determined first level spell.

† (2) indicates any randomly determined second level spell.

All spells are cast as if by second level MU's.

For every ten diabolos encountered there will be an additional leader type with three hit points, able to memorise an additional (random) first level spell, operating as a third level MU and doing 1d3 with his knife.

Each diabolo tribe has a large chief, armed with a 1d6 quarterstaff, rolling twice on the table above for spells memorised and then adding one second and one third level spell at random from the tribal book and with five hit points and fifth level MU power. This chief will have three leader type bodyguards.

A diabolo tribe has a 70% chance of 'familiar': 40% giant owls (1-3), 40% giant weasels (1-4), or 20% wolverines (1-4). These will guard the lair.

As with their close cousins, the kobolds, diabolos generally inhabit dark places in overgrown forests or underground. They hate bright sunlight, but have excellent night vision and 60' infra-red vision. In hand-to-hand combat in bright sunlight, they operate at -1 to hit.

They also share the kobold hatred of other life forms (especially brownies, pixies, sprites and particularly gnomes who they will attack on sight), and the delight in torture.

In addition to their own tongue, alignment language and common, diabolos also speak kobold, goblin, and orcish. They are 75% likely to be able to speak some others but this would vary from individual to individual and would depend on circumstances.

TROLLKIN By Dan Lukacinsky

No Appearing: 1-3
Armour Class: 3
Movement: 14"
Hit Dice: 1d8
Treasure: N
Attack: One bite for 1d4 or by weapon type
Alignment: Chaotic neutral
Intelligence: Very

The trollkin is a very strange combination of a brownie and a troll. They prefer to live in small holes or mounds and are somewhat sloppy. They love hard drink and all cheeses. They speak Common, Troll, Gnome, Halfling, Sprite, Pixie and Brownie.

If they carry a weapon it will usually be a dagger or a small net, sometimes many will get together with a large net (10% chance of being a Net of Entrapment) and attempt to trap passing creatures, but their favourite weapons are daggers (55% chance of being magical). They never carry anything but a dagger or net, at least none have been seen otherwise.

They hate gnomes, halflings and dwarfs, but their mortal enemies are pixies who they will attack on sight.

Trollkins have weak infravision at 20'. They may become invisible at will and have limited spell ability usually one 1st level magic-user spell determined at random. Like trolls, they regenerate 3hp per round and may rebond severed limbs. Also once per day they may call lightning as the 3rd level druid spell. They are surprised only on a roll of 1 on a d6. They make saving throws as a 5th level fighter.

Very rarely a trollkin may be of a player-character class (4% chance). It may progress up to 5th level as a thief, up to 6th as a fighter or up to 8th as an assassin.

Trollkins vary in colour from grey-black to sandy-brown. Their eyes are a hazel or light-green. Hair is dark to light-green. They are surprisingly strong – +1 on any damage they inflict. They wear finely crafted leather garments and boots. At 3' tall they are on good terms with most forest creatures. They have a life-span of 3000 years.

TRIST by John R Gordon

No Appearing: 1
Armour Class: 10
Movement: 0" but can be carried
Hit Dice: 1 hit point
Treasure: Completely variable
Attack: See below
Alignment: Chaotic evil
Intelligence: Very high

The trist is an asexual, truly malignant creature. It is born at any source of great evil or hate (an evil temple, or the site of a massacre, etc). A large (2'x2½'), clear crystal egg appears, inside which the trist itself lives. The egg is fragile and will shatter at a blow, killing the delicate trist inside, which is suspended in ethereal liquid. The trist appears as a neckless, shrivelled humanoid head, green, wrinkled, slimy and continually moving and twitching. Its eyes are cold, devoid of mercy or passion and its thin mouth is arrogant. The 'head' is surmounted by fibrous, rootlike, growths in constant motion, which give the trist buoyancy.

Then it waits to be found, feeding on the evil emanations at its birth-place. For the trist feeds on hate and ceases to exist without it. Thus the trist is always scheming to create hatred, upon which it can feed. The trist can charm up to 3 creatures (who must save v magic if within 30' of it). If they fail, they will become fanatically loyal servants of the trist for as long as it lives, and will carry it about with them so that it can carry out its evil deeds. The trist communicates with anyone who comes within 6" of it. Once 3 creatures have been charmed, the trist cannot control any more until 1 or more of them have been killed.

(Note: it is unlikely that the players will find the trist just after "birth" and be charmed by it. More likely they will find it at the heart of some chaotic and seemingly senseless situation.)

The trist then moves with its fanatical servants, usually to a town, to stir up and generate hatred. It is in planning this that the trist needs considerable cunning and intelligence, as well as ruthlessness (it will not hesitate to have one of its own servants killed to acquire a more important one). Hate can be generated in so many ways; setting different races off against each other; encouraging oppressive government and/or revolt; even throwing down money in the streets to generate greed and hatred or the unfair favouring of unpopular individuals.

If the trist is found when its followers are not at hand to defend it, it will try to convince the players it is a good or neutral harmless keeper of information.

Note: should evil players attempt to enter the trist's employment, it will merely pay out uneven and unfair wages to the players, to generate hatred between them. (It feels no need for servants other than its own charmed fanatics).

The trist is immune to sleep, charm and suggestion spells and has the psionic ability of Unlimited Telepathy. It is immune to psionic attacks except Mind Blast.

KROWKS by Dale Hueber

No Appearing: 1-12
Armour Class: 5
Movement: 3"/18"
Hit Dice: 3d8+1
Treasure: 1
Attack: Two claws for 1-3 each and one bite for 1d4+1 plus special

Alignment: Chaotic evil
Intelligence: Low but very cunning

With their 4' (average) wing-span and blood red eyes and beak, Krowks are terrible, black crow-like demons from the Planes of Hell and the Abyss that feed on the pain and torment of the souls there. They are sometimes sent by the Lords and Princes of Evil to aid their kind on the Prime Material Plane or as familiars to powerful magic-users and illusionists. Their coming is considered to be an omen of the worst kind.

They have 20% magic resistance and have the following powers, one per round, at will: darkness 5' radius, fear (as wand), detect invisible, detect illusion, and detect good. They can teleport once per day and curse their victims once per day with their demonic cawing. Their bite drains one point of strength in addition to the normal damage.

They have an avaricious greed for shiny objects and love the taste of bloody eyes.

GROMIT By John Smart

No Appearing: 1-20
Armour Class: 5 minimum
Movement: 7"
Hit Dice: 3d8
Treasure: Nil
Attack: Bite for 1-3, 2 claws for 1d4 each, 2 feet for 1-3 each, tail lash for 1-2 and 4 stings for 1hp each
Alignment: Neutral
Intelligence: Low

Gromits are tough, round little creatures, usually about 3' tall. They are quite dextrous and agile due to their three legs (dexterity 12+1d6) gaining dexterity bonuses on their armour class. Due to their small globular shape and their third leg, they are rather difficult to flank or attack from the rear unless surrounded.

Their bodies are dark brown, getting lighter at the appendages. Their antennae are almost black.

The gromit attacks with its beak for 1-3, its 2 claws for 1d4 each. It can also use two of its three feet per melee round doing 1-3 each and a tail lash which hits for 1-2. In addition it also has four wire-like antennae protruding from the top of its head/body, of which it will use 1d4 to attack each melee round for a 'sting' of 1 hit point each. □

World's Worst Holiday Spot

HALF the holiday-makers who go to Kadath suffer from some sort of mental disorder. It is the worst holiday spot in the world for insanity according to Theatre of the Mind Enterprises.

The US based team have conducted investigations in their latest Call of Cthulhu scenario, Pursuit to Kadath. The problem seems to stem from the minions of Cthulhu to be found there.

Adventurers are advised to take precautions if they are taking a trip there. Avoiding unwashed fruit, and tap water will not help, but Chaosium have released The Cthulhu Companion which contains snippets and expansions of the Cthulhu mythos that should prove of benefit to anyone planning a trip there.

Another boost for intrepid souls is the release of boxed sets of Call of Cthulhu figures by Grenadier Miniatures. The two sets available are Adventurers and Monsters.

Travel Hazard

A WARNING for anyone planning a car trip this month: Watch out for Autoduellists! The roads could prove a death-trap following the release of Car Wars Expansion Kits IV and V by Steve Jackson Games. Both provide more road maps and countless vehicle counters.

The roads will be further congested by the influx of Car Wars Miniature released by Grenadier Miniatures. There are 8 different blister packed sets in the range.

Copper Kudos

COMMUNITY policing has proved a success for Judge Dredd, the cop of the future. Games Workshop's game has become the first hobby game to be selected by the Design Centre.

Games Workshop's new release for this month, Talisman, a role-playing board game, is also creating considerable excitement in the trade. In the words of one hardened gamer, 'It looks so good, I'm just itching to play it'.

Frontiers of Space Expanded

SCIENTISTS at the TSR laboratories claim to have expanded the existing frontiers of space. The revelation comes in their latest release Night Hawks. Their contention is that this is not a simple extension of Star Frontiers but details an entirely new galaxy with new rules to match. It is more than simply an add-on to Star Frontiers: featuring as it does an additional space battle board game.

LOOK OUT FOR SCOUTS

THE Scout movement will receive a much needed shot in the arm with the release of Scouts from Game Designers' Workshop. This is Traveller Book 6 and completes the Mercenary/High Guard/Scouts trilogy.

Also imminent is the Traveller Adventure, the companion to the Traveller Book, and a new Traveller adventure Safari Ship.

Something Chaotic This Way Comes

AT LAST! Something to delight the fiends of the Abyss! The Mark of Chaos - the generation of chaotic features for RPG characters - is a feature in Citadel Miniatures brand new catalogue cum magazine. With their policy of systematically re-modelling figures, Citadel found that a catalogue would be needed at regular intervals. Hence the new Citadel Compendium - an irregular journal. The first issue not only contains line illustrations of all the current Citadel figures, but a Warhammer Scenario, The Mark of Chaos, SF in Warhammer, The Beginners Guide to Figures Painting, and more.

Next Issue

WHAT you've been waiting for in the next sensation saturated White Dwarf: The Lone and Level Sands, an AD&D AND RuneQuest adventure set in a demon-infested desert tomb; Database, updating computers in Traveller; a new cult for goblins in RuneQuest plus all the regular features and more.

WARMACHINE FOR SALE

ARE you planning to lay siege to your neighbour's fort? Fancy bombarding those noisy hobbits at the end of the street? Then head for the local Orc village where their latest Monstrous Orc War Machine is up for grabs. Designed by Tony Ackland, the machine comes complete with a crew of 3 orcs in Citadel Miniatures' newest boxed set. The bidding should be interesting and possibly blood-thirsty with representatives of each of Citadel's other new boxed sets present. They are (above) Trogodytes and (below) Lizard Warriors. Both sets were sculpted by Tom Meier.

TO THE WOODS!

WOODELVES will be not be too pleased to hear what is to the south of their homelands, Northern Mirkwood. Iron Crown Enterprises have just released the details in the latest in their Middle Earth series of play aids. It is Southern Mirkwood - Haunt of the Necromancer.

ICE should also be releasing their Middle Earth game Fellowship of the Ring in the not too distant future.

- * OVER 200 DIFFERENT PLAYERS
- * FULLY DESIGNED FANTASY WORLD
- * BI-MONTHLY PLAYERS NEWSLETTER
- * FLEXIBLE GAME SYSTEM GIVING FREEDOM OF CHOICE AND ACTIONS
- * RUNNING FOR OVER TWO YEARS

Crasimoff's World is a PBM game of exploration and adventure. As a player you assume the role of chieftain in a band of brave adventurers set on gaining knowledge and power. Your party will set out from a small town, knowing nothing about the world apart from a few rumours. As you travel you will learn more about the land and its secrets, encountering other parties, races and creatures.

"There are tokens detailing magic, spells, creatures, parties met, artifacts, treasure, money, and many other items which you discover as you play the game. KJC Games has been running Crasimoff's World for over a year now, and the effort the gamesmaster puts into each turn never ceases to amaze me. Most players find themselves offered a different scenario each turn, or find that a new twist has happened to an existing adventure."

ENDLESS PLANS

Pssst!
Come
closer...

D.A.

Goody-goodies got you down?
Bored by the same, routine games?
Wish you didn't have to share the loot?

Do you want something more challenging than filling out a form or blackening a circle on a computer-read card?

Tired of restricting deadlines, high fees, and little or no personal attention to what you want to do?

THEN

Let DEVIL'S ADVOCATE GAMES take you away from it all! We offer three new—and unique—alternatives to the plethora of existing, ho-hum PBM's:

WHODUNIT?—A game of mystery and suspense, set against the backdrop of a major U.S. metropolis. As a fledgling private detective, can you make a name for yourself by solving crimes in the crime-ridden '20's and '30's?

Room 4 is an internationally famous (and infamous) spy bureau, working for its own ends. You are its newest agent. Are your skills up to the challenge of international espionage?

REVENGE! is a totally new approach to fantasy PBM role-playing gaming. Instead of being bound to the usual goals of rescuing maidens and chasing the Bad Guys, YOU can be the evil wizard, fiery dragon, or black knight. The only limitation on your character is your own imagination. . . .

Set-up is $6 per game; turns are $3 each. All of our games have been designed to allow maximum player input throughout play. To enter, send check or money order to:

DO YOU HAVE WHAT IT TAKES TO BE A HIGHWAY WARRIOR?

only
£6.95

Have you ever pressed the imaginary button on the dashboard of your car to vaporise the idiot driver in front? BATTLECARS is a game in which 'dangerous driving' takes on a whole new meaning. Vent your frustrations on other players by arming your car with machine guns and rockets. Watch with glee as cars explode into fireballs. Drive on and smile as the next victim comes into range. Set the gunnery computer and squeeze the trigger – then BOOM!

How long can you survive in the deadly arena of the future? Do you have what it takes to be a highway warrior?

Only by playing BATTLECARS, with its unique simulation of driving skill and combat, will you ever find out.

BATTLECARS is the latest title from Games Workshop, developed by Ian Livingstone and Gary Chalk over a period of three years. But this is just the beginning; Expansion Sets, Role-Playing Supplements and Miniatures are yet to come.

BATTLECARS – The game of deadly driving
