GOLDEN DEMON WINNERS 2005

Forward by Thomas Webster-Deakin

Thomas Webster-Deakin

Each year thousands of hobbyists journey to Games Day to take part in the largest painting competition in the world – Golden Demon. Of the many hobbyists who enter, some are aiming to be proclaimed the best painter in the world and be awarded the most distinguished of prizes, the Slayer Sword. For others, the aim is to win a Golden Demon statuette. However, for the majority of entrants the simple act of taking part is reward enough; having their miniature on display for all to see makes many hobbyists rightly proud. Year after year we all share our amazement at the flair, skill and imagination that goes into creating the entries on display.

If you've never been to Games Day and stood shoulder to shoulder with fellow hobbyists and marvelled at the Golden Demon entries, I can only recommend that you do so. Seeing the entries 'in the flesh' or pictured on a high-resolution monitor can literally take your breath away.

This insert presents the best in the world. We hope you'll marvel (as much as we have!) at the miniatures inside these pages and perhaps be inspired to take part yourself in a future Golden Demon. Perhaps one day you'll be the one holding the Slayer Sword!
